Mission Fields families hope they'll stay dry thanks to new flood protection

By PAUL WOLF

EVEN IF this winter's rainfall and runoff are just as horrendous as they were in January and March of 1995, the Carmel River won't overtake its banks and sweep through Mission Fields, according to county officials.

The neighborhood located just south of the Carmel city limits and north of the Carmel River was battered twice — inundating about 200 homes — because the flood-control system was ill-equipped to handle the swollen river.

That wouldn't be the case now, according to county officials and some residents.

The many improvements to the levees and waterways that have been undertaken over the past two-and-a-half years have added significant new safeguards, said Ron Lundquist, the county's deputy public works director.

CHS soccer coach sues for reinstatement

By KIRSTIE WILDE

MICHAEL JONES, who was fired as the Carmel high school soccer coach in March, is suing the school district to get his job back.

Although he only worked for CHS for two years, he was a non-paid volunteer for years prior, and he was viewed by the parents of many soccer players as an exceedingly devoted coach. They say he used thousands of dollars of his own money to buy uniforms and equipment, set up and helped fund scholarships for soccer players, initiated the junior referee training program, and brought world-renowned stars to work with the Carmel players.

Honest mistake?

Jones was dismissed March 3 after a playoff game in which he allowed an academically ineligible player to serve as goalie. He called it an honest mistake, made because he trusted the word of the student. He appealed to the school district to give him his job back in May, but was turned down.

In his lawsuit filed in Monterey Superior Court on September 29, Jones charged that the Carmel Unified School District and CHS principal Eric Paulson damaged his good name by implying that he was fired for immorality, dishonesty, incompetence or unsatisfactory performance, which he said are not true.

Jones said CHS tried to solicit negative

Humpback washes up, causes stink

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE STENCH and sight of a dead whale on Carmel Beach caught some beach-goers by surprise this week.

While the dogs "went crazy" over the mass of blubber on the north end of Carmel Beach, a swarm of seagulls enjoyed a rare feast.

Tomo Eguchi, a graduate student at Moss Landing Marine Laboratories, identified the carcass as a humpback whale that had probably been dead at least a month.

Perhaps its remains weren't quite as recognizable to the untrained passer-by: The skeleton was almost completely gone and the "leftovers" of the body were pretty well mangled.

However, Eguchi was able to point out the extraordinarily large flipper — characteristic of the humpback — as well as the massive bones of its spine.

The number of marine mammals making appearances on the beach are only a fraction of the animals who die at sea.

"Everything has to die," Eguchi exclaimed.

The whale could have been killed by a number of things, including disease, he said.

As for the missing skeleton, it probably sank to the bottom of the ocean, Eguchi said.

Humpbacks often take up residence in

Man gets $775 for seven minutes of real work and a jog to finish

By PAUL WOLF

■ For comprehensive results of the Fine Arts 5K, see pages 20-21A

HE REALLY only ran about a mile and a half of the 3.1-mile race, but Jamey Harris of San Carlos was declared the winner — with a record time and a handsome $750 in prize money.

Yet for all his good fortune Sunday at the Fine Arts 5K, the community had good cause to feel sorry for him, as well as for the befuddled volunteer who led him down the wrong road.

"I would have preferred to run the whole race, but it didn't blow my whole day," said the 26-year-old Harris, finding his sense of humor about the ordeal.

Harris's lead at about 2 kilometers was so great that he appeared bound for victory and a decisive improvement in his course record from last year, 15:04.

A race volunteer on a bicycle (who shall remain nameless) met the front runner on Scenic near Valley View Avenue and led him around the sharp turn on Scenic next to the Carmel River Lagoon. While the volunteer should have led Harris all the way up Carmelo to 16th Avenue before turning left, he instead turned left one block prematurely — taking Harris onto 17th Avenue, cutting a quarter-mile chunk off the race!

Harris ran several hundred yards off course up to Valley View, where the volunteer discovered his mistake, turned around and directed other misguided runners to stay on Carmelo.

Harris jogged back to the finish line, then threw aside his bib number in disgust. But he got over his experience quickly enough. Race Director Bill Burleigh assembled the event committee and several of the top-finishing runners, and they agreed to give Harris an "arbitrary" victory and the $775 purse for breaking 15 minutes.

Beautiful symbolism

The official finishing time of 14:59 — a new course record — was a piece of beautiful symbolism, although it was highly irregular and possibly unheard-of in these parts.

"I appreciate what they did — trying to right a wrong," said Harris, a semi-professional runner who specializes in the 1500 meters and mile on the track. "I'll come back next year and run a 14:40 or something and then they'll know what I can do."

Burleigh described the volunteer as devastated by what he did. The director called the volunteer's error "the worst mistake in my 14 years of directing races."

Then, as only a jurist could do, the retired Monterey County municipal court judge used lawyerly talk to put the whole thing into perspective. "This mistake was just a human mistake; it was not life-threatening, it didn't injure anyone's reputation, or deprive someone of the ability to

Francis Whitaker, blacksmith, receives award from First Lady

By KIERSTEN MCCUTCHAN

ON BEHALF of the National Endowment for the Arts, Hillary Rodham Clinton presented a $10,000 award to Francis Whitaker, a former Carmel resident and onetime member of the Carmel City Council.

Whitaker, now a resident of Aspen, Colo., is best known for his blacksmithing work in private and public areas of Carmel.

The Forge-in-the-Forest/General Store Restaurant was originally called Francis Whitaker's Forge-in-the-Forest, where he did live-iron work demonstrations.

Also, the windows of Santa Catalina School in Monterey are crowned with Whitaker's ornamental work in the form of grilles and guards. And Carmel's Harrison Memorial Library wrought metal accents are also his handiwork.

The award is a National Heritage Fellow Award, given to 10 people. It honors Whitaker's lifelong achievements as a working "Americana" master craftsman and artisan.

Whitaker moved to Carmel in 1929 and served on the city council from 1952 until 1963, where he reportedly served a vocal and colorful tenure. Whitaker moved from Carmel to Aspen in 1963.

Francis Whitaker

Whitaker's education as a blacksmith began at 15 when his father sent him to Philadelphia to apprentice under a master of the profession. This turn in Whitaker's life was pivotal in forming his life's passion.

Some of his achievements include: having a blacksmith school in North Carolina named in his honor; his election to the Fellows of the American Craft Council; the writing and publishing of "The Blacksmith's Cookbook," a textbook on blacksmithing techniques; and the foundation of The Francis Whitaker Blacksmith's Educational Foundation, which helps blacksmiths obtain scholarships and grants.

Whitaker still figures prominently in Carmel history, according to Carmel Heritage, which honored him last year at a party celebrating his life and work.

City-Muston saga may be over, but two sides still don't see eye-to-eye

By PAUL WOLF

DAVID MUSTON'S message to the city this week was, "We can still work this out quietly, if you apologize for the way you mistreated me." And the city's response was, "We've worked it out. It's over. Case closed."

Muston

Even if this week marks the end of the city-Muston saga, one thing is clear: The two sides are no closer to seeing eye-to-eye than they were when the dispute started.

City Administrator Jere Kersnar has responded to David Muston's charges of official misconduct by denying all of the business owner's claims and discounting Muston's requests for an apology and an independent investigation.

In a voluminous report responding to charges of "malicious harassment," "character assassination" and multiple blunders on the part of city officials, Kersnar closed the door on the possibility of meeting Muston's demands.

Kersnar

"The city made some errors and they were admitted initially," Kersnar told The Pine Cone this week. "As I said in the report, the city acted completely in a professional manner."

Muston, meanwhile, says vague admissions of "errors" are notgood enough. The city's errors need to be documented on paper so his landlord and anyone else who should know can be assured he is not an irresponsible tenant and business operator.

Kersnar told the newspaper there is no plan on the city's part to sit down with

Water district embarks on annual river clearing

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Water Management District has begun its eighth annual Carmel River clean-up and channel clearing.

Crews from the California Conservation Corps will be helping district staff through Nov. 7 with clearing trash, flood debris and vegetation from the river channel.

The staff will continue the work through Dec. 15, weather and river flow permitting.

Clearing will take place along the lower 15 miles of the river, from the Carmel River Lagoon to Camp Steffani near Carmel Valley Village.

The district's objective is to keep the center of the river clear of blocks to reduce potential erosion hazards. Fallen trees, debris and vegetation growing in the center of the channel will be removed.

Hand crews will take out trees and shrubs that collect debris carried by the river during high flows. That material potentially deflects river flows onto adjacent channel banks, causing erosion and the loss of property.

RLS receives financial grant for students

STEVENSON SCHOOL, with campuses in Carmel and Pebble Beach, has been awarded a $10,000 grant for Monterey County students needing financial aid in order to attend the school.

Monies come from Monterey County's Grover Hermann Foundation Fund, a branch of a larger community foundation group that helps non profits, across the county, with grants each year.

Muston because "closure" was achieved with the findings of his internal investigation.

In addition, Kersnar cites an Oct. 3 letter from Sue Stryker, chief investigator of the DA's office, who stated that there was no evidence of criminal activity by the city. However, the letter does state that Muston is free to file an action with the grand jury.

Here are some of the facts of the dispute:

■ City officials cited Muston for 20 business and structural violations of the city code, both minor and serious.

Three city officials, including an armed police officer, presented the list of violations during business hours — an event that Muston called the start of a campaign of embarrassment and humiliation.

■ Some alleged violations were found to be untrue (e.g., no hazardous chemicals, no apartments upstairs where residents could be endangered), and some violations — safety issues mainly — were corrected quickly.

In a matter of weeks, 19 of the 20 violations were "cleared," to use Kersnar's term.

■ The one lingering code conflict was the question of Muston's "nonconforming use" caused by his photo finishing lab in the basement. The legitimacy of this "manufacturing use" dragged on for at least eight months. City officials tried but failed to prove that the photo finishing use was only intermittent and thus could not be grandfathered in. "City staff were questioning Mr. Muston's veracity, and only acquiesced when (we) concluded (we) could not prove a violation," Kersnar wrote in his report.

City officials granted Muston a certificate of occupancy to legitimize all operations within the store.

Muston said the city operated under the assumption of "guilty until proven innocent." He said he spent $30,000 to fight city hall with attorneys, engineers and inspectors.

Kersnar, meanwhile, insisted that city power was not used arbitrarily, explaining, "This is a serious issue for us — to determine what uses are allowed in our city."

Standing by his claim that the city must order independent investigations, Muston cited chapter and verse from several municipal code sections. On their face, the sections would compel the city administrator to appoint "an independent investigator" in cases of alleged harassment that involved himself, and the police chief to select an investigator in cases of alleged misconduct similiar to the Muston-city dispute.

put food on their table."

Putting his racing talents in the service of basic needs is at the heart of Harris's agenda. The internationally competitive athlete earns his living through a combination of hourly massage therapy, racing the roads and keeping up a tit-for-tat relationship with Reebok, which pays his travel expenses in exchange for some promotional work. Harris trains with the Palo Alto-based track club called Reebok Aggies.

"The prize money was the main reason I came to Carmel last Sunday," Harris admitted.

To those who know the sport of road racing, the gesture was unconventional, to say the least. But heck, this is Carmel, not Boston or New York or San Francisco. Both Burleigh and Harris acknowledged that the arbitrary victory would never have been given away at, say, an Olympic Marathon, or at the 7.8 mile Bay to Breakers. But a solution was needed.

"We figured the sport of long-distance running is pretty predictable," Burleigh said. "We could see that he was going to win. Everyone was gracious about this, and everybody went away happy."

Jamey Harris blasted down Scenic Road, building up his lead until he was led astray by a volunteer on a bicycle. Despite being thrown out of contention, Harris would later be named winner and given an arbitrary time of 14:59.

MISSION FIELDS: Flooding unlikely after extensive levee work

With everybody predicting a heavy rainy season on the horizon, Lundquist was blunt: The worse of the two disasters, the March flood, was a "2-year event." The flood-control network now in place can handle a 25-year event. Maybe not a 50-year event. Certainly a 25-year event.

Unpredictability

Owen Stewart, associate water resources engineer for the Monterey County Water Resources Agency, gave a similar assessment, but with a caveat: "There is a significant difference in the amount of possible flood hazard from 1995 and we've made the possibility of flooding more predictable . . . but there is still a level of unpredictability."

Larry Levine, the Mission Fields resident who chairs the citizen advisory committee that has pushed the agenda of flood-control improvements, said still further levee improvements must be carried out, despite the already-improved flood-control system.

"You can prepare yourself up to a point, but you can always have more rain over a longer period of time than you did the last time," he said. "People are really nervous about El Niño and what kind of winter it may bring."

Robert Renard, volunteer observer with the National Weather Service, said heavier-than-normal rains could fall this year and that "some preparations for unusual circumstances are probably in order."

Paying for results

The levee and waterway improvements have been carried out to a large extent with tax money raised in cooperation with residents from Mission Fields and other mouth of the valley properties. Together, they formed County Service Area 50 (CSA 50).

Two-hundred-twenty Mission Fields homes are assessed $222 a year, while other properties, such as the Carmel River Inn and businesses in The Crossroads, have assessments based on a number of factors. CSA 50's annual revenue stream is about $127,000, according to Levine.

To date, key improvements to the flood-control network include:

■ Increasing the height and strength of the levee that separates the Carmel River from Mission Fields.

In 1995, 1,200 dirt-filled sand bags were put on top of the ruptured north-side levee, largely destroyed during the twin floods.

According to Levine, the levee should be yet taller and stronger, but the two-year-old reinforcements are already a step in the right direction.

■ On the other side of the river, the levee separating the channel from the open space next to the Carmel Area Wastewater plant has been removed.

The measure has created a floodplain on state-owned wetlands. Caltrans is using that land, owned by state parks, as a wetlands replacement site for its hoped-for Hatton Canyon Freeway, which would sacrifice wetlands east of Carmel.

That area south of the river is frequently called Odello West, because the Odello family formerly leased the property from the state to maintain its artichoke field.

Caltrans footed the bill for the southside levee removal, a flood-control measure that fits in well with the state park's improvements to the lagoon environment.

As recently as last January, Odello West was inundated with river water after a rainy spell, leading Steward to conclude. "It works."

■ Portions of the levee on the east side of Highway 1 were lowered to create a flood zone on the so-called Odello East, another artichoke field that is now owned by former Carmel mayor Clint Eastwood.

That artificial waterway has been established with the permission of Eastwood.

■ Plans are complete for the construction of a "tie-back levee" at the end of Rio Road on the north side of the river.

This improvement would prevent the kind of flooding that occurred in March 1995, when water overtook the northbank of the river and traveled on Rio Road, flooding the Crossroads and housing complexes like Arroyo Carmel.

The improvement, whose $360,000 to $370,000 bill will be shared by Caltrans and CSA 50, would not stop waters from overtaking Rancho Cañada Golf Course, but the road would be safe from raging waters.

"All the stuff that has happened has given everybody a sense of safety," said Mission Fields resident Jim Scholfield.

■ For a story about how Mission Fields real estate values have rebounded in the last two years, see page 4C. Also, see 3A for an article on the water district's channel-clearing project.

WHALE

the Peninsula waters during the summer months, their "foraging" season, according to Scott Benson of Moss Landing.

When considering the whole stretch of coastline from Monterey to San Francisco, beached humpbacks aren't rare, Benson said.

California averages about three beached humpbacks a year, according to Joe Cordaro, wildlife biologist for the National Marine Fisheries Service.

Beached grey whales are more common — California averages 15 a year — partly because they swim closer to shore and partly because there are just more of them in these waters, Cordaro said.

The fisheries service reports about 26,000 grey whales migrating through California's coastal waters, while about 600 humpback come here and stay for the summer.

The whale came back?

Eguchi wondered if the creature on Carmel Beach was the same whale that washed up at Soberanes Point in Garrapata State Park in August. That whale first appeared Aug. 1, fully intact and belly-up, according to Garrapata Ranger John Magee.

Biologists at Moss Landing originally hoped to tow the whale by boat back to their labs in order to preserve the skeleton. But when the carcass got lodged in a hole in the rocks, they gave up on that idea.

The whale's body continued to decay in the rocks until Sept. 20 when it finally washed out. By that time most of the skeleton was gone. Garrapata State Park applied to the National Marine Fisheries to keep keep a few of the leftover bones.

Anyone else who'd like to keep marine mammals bones as a souvenirs might want to think twice: Taking mammal parts home without a permit is a federal offense, Magee said.

Over the years, state beaches have had to deal with various dead sea mammals washing up on shore, Magee said. Much of the time, the animals are just too big to dispose.

"Sometimes we have to just let nature take its course and let them decompose," Magee said.

Carmelites may not have to wait too long for their whale carcass to vanish, Benson said. With the storm that arrived this week, the problem might be washed away.

'Sometimes we have to just let nature take its course and let them decompose.'

— John Magee, ranger at Garrapata State Park

comments about him from employees of the school, as well as students and their parents, and fed maliciously false information about him to The Pine Cone, which humiliated and embarrassed him. He is seeking compensatory and punitive damages.

The Pine Cone contacted Principal Paulson at Carmel High, to give him an opportunity to detail the reasons he dismissed Jones. But because of the pending litigation, Paulson felt he was not able to comment.

Hair in shower leads to discovery of 'unusual' burglary on Scenic Road

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE MYSTERIOUS hair they found in the shower drain was the first clue for residents of one San Antonio home who discovered they'd been burglarized.

After all, the burglar hadn't taken very much — just three cardboard boxes of leatherbound books and, apparently, a shower.

Sometime between Sept. 26 and Oct. 4, the $7,000 classic book collection was stolen from the San Antonio vacation home. After returning to the house, the residents didn't know about the theft until they discovered an uninvited guest had made himself or herself right at home.

The Carmel Police contacted all the Peninsula book dealers and so far have found no trace of the books, according to Carmel Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras.

Another house, on Scenic and Eighth, also a vacation home, was the recent target of a burglary. Sometime between Sept. 2 and Oct. 4, two oriental rugs, three paintings and two prints, totaling $16,000 were stolen.

There were no forced-open windows or doors in either house. Police are looking at one potential suspect in the Scenic Road burglary, and are continuing the investigation of both burglaries.

It's not clear yet whether the two cases are related, police say.

Task force says police officer needed on beach

By PAUL WOLF

ALL THE hard work that the beach task force has put into dreaming up better rules for the beach and surrounding areas would not be worth much if the city does not hire an officer to patrol them.

That was the message of the 12-member task force, which is not far from finishing its long policy agenda after months of study. Their opinion is not shared by Carmel police.

Bill Uretsky

"When you think of the destruction to the bluffs (from illegal trampling), this would save the city money in the end when it has to repair them," commented task force member Jana Gill. "It would make all the work we've done meaningful."

The task force, which met Monday, voted unanimously to include in the beach master plan a recommendation for special beach patrol — that is, an officer who would make the beach, the Del Mar parking lot, Scenic Road, the bluff and the walkway their only beat.

The task force has recommendations regarding beach fires, bluff protection, out-of-control dogs, adequate posting of signs, handicapped access and parking. Members already have voted to encourage the development of a volunteer corps whose function would be primarily educational. The volunteers would be equipped with radios to contact the police, but they would not give citations.

Undermining flexibility

Carmel Police Lt. Bill Uretsky, who did not attend the meeting Monday, told The Pine Cone Wednesday that the task force may misunderstand police operations.

Having one part-time officer who never leaves the confines of the beach area may undermine the department's flexibility, as violations may occur at any time of day or night.

"This (arrangement) would be very unusual in a small town," Uretsky said. "The problem is logistics. There are different problems occurring at different times."

Uretsky said that a general increase in the total number of enforcement hours on the beach would be the best way to improve surveillance of the beach.

"Things happen on the beach when there is no one there

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Planning Commission of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea will conduct a public hearing in the City Hall Council Chambers, located on the east side of Monte Verde Street between Ocean and Seventh Avenues, on Wednesday, October 22, 1997. The public hearing will be opened at 4:00 P.M. or as soon thereafter as possible.

IF YOU CHALLENGE THE NATURE OF THE PROPOSED ACTION IN COURT, YOU MAYBE LIMITED TO RAISING ONLY THOSE ISSUES YOU OR SOMEONE ELSE RAISED AT THE PUBLIC HEARING DESCRIBED IN THIS NOTICE, OR IN WRITTEN CORRESPONDENCE DELIVERED TO THE PLANNING COMMISSION OR THE CITY COUNCIL AT, OR PRIOR TO THE PUBLIC HEARING.

The Planning Commission will consider adoption of a Resolution forwarding recommendations to the City Council regarding water allocations pursuant to Section 17.08.050 of the Municipal Code. The proposed action would establish a category of allocation credits iin lieu of development of certain vacant lots north of Second Avenue in Pescadero Canyon. Water credits in this allocation would be available only for projects located on other property outside of Pescadero Canyon but within City limits. The purpose of this action is to transfer potential development out of Pescadero Canyon and preserve the affected lots as permanent open space. A Coastal Permit is not required. This project is categorically exempt from CEQA review (Class 17).

But task force members insist that it needs to be a higher priority if their new policies are to have any teeth.

Citations at the beach are extremely rare, but that is because police officers prefer to warn people and educate them rather than give them citations, according to Carmel Police Detective Pete Poitras.

Healthy Living

By JUDY HIGGERSON, RN
President/Owner Country Home Care

"Because October is National Breast Cancer Month, it's ironic that my breast cancer was diagnosed exactly a year ago. No one in my family had ever had it, so I'd been pretty lax about breast self-examination. Imagine my surprise when a spot on a routine mammogram led to treatment for cancer.

My life was topsy-turvy for a few weeks — I had some chest and arm muscle problems which complicated managing my husband's insulin shots — but time passes, and it's been a year now.

What made the biggest difference in getting us back to normal was the help we received from the Country Home Care staff. For example, their assistance with meals, my shampoo, my husband's diabetes problems, housekeeping and grocery shopping was such a blessing. Actually, my daughter back East arranged for the help; she's a nurse for a home health agency so she deals with this sort of thing routinely. She called Country Home Care at their Carmel office and made all the arrangements. She always was a sharp cookie!"

On Tuesday, Oct. 28, from 7:30-8:45PM, Dr. Laura Stampleman, Medical Oncologist, will present "Newest Approaches to the Management of Breast Cancer" at Salinas Valley Memorial Hospital. For more information, call 624-4663.

No dogs, no brandy, just neighbors

Coffee Break

By BEVERLY BORGMAN

IF YOU'VE heard something about a group called "Project St. Bernard," don't start looking for a big dog with a keg of brandy hanging from his neck. The local St. Bernard is a group that follows that old maxim, "Find a need and fill it," the same saying we used to see on Kaiser cement trucks.

However, this has nothing to do with brandy or cement, or even saints, unless you count the late Marjorie Montilius, who undoubtedly now resides in heaven. It was she who looked around her neighborhood and noticed that on most days nearly every other house was empty. These were the "weekenders," the second homes of people who actually lived somewhere else.

This was both good and bad for Marjorie and other permanent residents. It meant that most of the time they had no noisy neighbors. It also meant that most of the time they had no neighbors at all.

Some might consider this a win-win situation, particularly in this age of "mind your own business" and high fences. But Marjorie understood that for the frail or elderly person living alone, empty houses don't offer much comfort, and "St. Bernard" was born.

I can't help but think that Marjorie would be looking down with a great big smile if she'd been at a training meeting last week, when 18 people showed up to learn (or relearn) the skills of being a neighbor. Bill Gerber was one of them. Bill is a kid of 89!

When you stop and think about it, being a neighbor is not such a big challenge. It usually means only that you care enough to be concerned about the general safety and well-being of the person next-door or across the street. In fact, let me give you an example of what a neighbor is NOT:

Last week my daughter, bicycling to teach her class at U.C. Santa Barbara, took a fall. She happened to be in front of the married students' housing where she herself lived until a few years ago.

"Mom, the bike was on TOP of me, and this woman, sitting on the grass, simply LOOKED at me," never moving to give assistance. "Maybe she didn't speak English," said Patty, who teaches ESL (English as a second language). "But she could have come over and helped me up."

You can bet your boots that had Patty been in Carmel, a St. Bernard would have come to her rescue.

Nosy neighbors

Unfortunately, too many of us have come to think that if we keep an eye on our neighbor's house ... Wonder why the lights aren't on tonight. We are being nosy. Others are simply shy about walking up to new neighbors and introducing themselves. "I don't want to get involved," is often the wary excuse.

I well remember Deanna, the beautiful and intelligent woman who moved in next-door to me when our tract of houses in Walnut Creek was brand new. I introduced myself, and we became friends. But when someone moved in across the street a few weeks later, Deanna wasn't willing to take the same risk. Instead, she said, "Why don't you go meet those people — and tell me what they're like."

"Meet them yourself," I told her. But I don't think she ever did.

This morning I looked out the window and saw that the woman who lives two doors from me was out working in her yard. She and her family moved in two months ago, but I'd never gotten around to saying hello. This was yet another day I could have found excuses for not making the effort, but I remembered Deanna.

"Start walking," I told my feet.

Fifteen minutes later I came home with a jar of homemade jam and, I hope, a new friend and neighbor.

The St. Bernard group is still looking for a few good neighbors. For more information, phone Becky Hanna at 624-6549.

Enjoy full Life Care retirement living in Pacific Grove.

Retirement living hasn't slowed down Don and Irene Slaiter. Both say they're as active today as they were during their careers. As volunteer docents for Bay Net, they support their love of marine life on the Monterey Peninsula and share their knowledge with others at Coast Guard Pier and Lover's Point near their home at Canterbury Woods.

Don and Irene enjoy good food and friends in the gracious and open dining room at Canterbury Woods.

Don and Irene also find the time and energy to be certified American Red Cross volunteers, ready to accept a call for help anytime they're needed.

When not volunteering, Don takes golf lessons and enjoys line dancing with Irene and other Canterbury Woods residents.

"We're so lucky," says Irene, "and so happy to be living here in comfort with so many other active and interesting people. We feel secure in knowing that at our home at Canterbury Woods we're guaranteed comprehensive lifetime medical care."

Sierra Club sues county for Rancho San Carlos approval

By PAUL MILLER

IF THE headline looks familiar, it's because the news is a case of déjà vu.

On February 6, 1996, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors approved the Rancho San Carlos project for the first time. Less than a month later, the Sierra Club challenged that approval in Monterey County Superior Court.

As a result of the lawsuit and the defeat of Measure M at the ballot box last November, the Rancho San Carlos partnership scaled back their development plans — eliminating the hotel, the commercial center, and some home sites.

On August 26, 1997, the Board approved the reduced plans, including 316 homesites and a golf course.

Two weeks ago, the Sierra Club and a group calling itself the Coalition to Preserve Rancho San Carlos filed suit again, claiming that approval of the reduced plan violated the California Environmental Quality Act and the Monterey County General Plan.

The Sierra Club lawsuit is separate from the action filed the same day by activist David Dilworth.

Among the claims in the new Sierra Club suit:

- There was "inadequate analysis of impacts to Steelhead trout" which have been located on the ranch by the National Marine Fisheries Service.
- The county failed to analyze project impacts on the red-legged frog, which has been recently listed as threatened by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

PACIFIC GROVE'S VICTORIAN HOMES WELCOME PUBLIC SUNDAY

By BETH PENNEY

THE OLDEST Pacific Grove Victorian to open its doors to the public on Sunday has been on this earth 114 years, and when Anita Hilton bought it, she thought it was a wonderful, livable piece of history.

She was soon brought to her senses. "You watch movies like 'The Money Pit,'" she says, referring to the comedy about a couple who tries to fix up an old house, "and you don't laugh." Since her purchase, she says she has replaced "everything but the bathroom — roof to plumbing and heating."

Hilton spent the past week sweeping up construction dust and preparing for the 27th Victorian Home Tour. Costumed docents will explain the house's history to tour-goers, so Hilton doesn't have to worry about entertaining, but she says she'll set out extra lemon drops in the bowl that always stands ready for friends and neighborhood children.

Work continues on Anita Hilton's 1883 house on Fountain.

Pacific Grove has celebrated its unique heritage by opening the doors of many of its beach cottages, as well as other examples of Victorian, Edwardian and arts-and-crafts architecture, during the annual Home Tour. It is sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, the Heritage Society of Pacific Grove and the Pacific Grove Art Center.

'You need someone who thinks like you and wants to preserve the house. Don't take 'it isn't possible' for an answer'
— Homeowner Anita Hilton on contractors

On Sunday, twelve buildings will be open, including Crftsman bungalows built as late as 1917, three of the popular bed and breakfast inns, the Point Pinos Lighthouse and Ketchum's Barn. The Lighthouse and the Barn have both been recently restored as museums.

Last year's tour drew about 800 people. Many of the homes were selected this year so the curious (and those hardy souls considering a restoration themselves) could see some renovation projects from the inside out.

Ancient timbers and old-time colors

The outside of Hilton's house retains its 1883 appearance, even down to the paint color. Hilton crawled under the house to locate original timber and find evidence of the old-time colors, and she then took swatches to the paint store. "They told me no one was painting houses that color," she says of the gray-green hue, but she did it anyway.

The house's interior is different. It reflects Hilton's preference for functionality over Victorian frills. Walls and floors are white, except for granite-patterned linoleum in the kitchen and a splash of peach-colored paint surrounding the skylight. An institutional stove speaks to Hilton's former career as a chef.

A stand alone gunmetal-gray hospital medicine cabinet is a focal point of the kitchen, housing a set of utilitarian jadite restaurant ware (remember those indestructible opaque-green glass mugs and platters?) from the '40s.

"I wanted hospital fixtures in the bathroom," Hilton says, "but I couldn't find anyone who knew how to put them in." The bathroom does sport a unique shower stall-sized tub, which Hilton had built specially.

Blackboards of all sizes and shapes have been worked into the walls and doors in strategic, but not traditional, places — above the bay window in the dining area and on the lower panel on the front door.

The window seat in the dining room is Hilton's addition. "That's the most important thing in the whole house," she says. "The view is so great."

In addition to the major renovation tasks, all the windows in the house now match, Hilton says, as well as the railings. That, she admits, was one of the biggest chores. The house has had six owners over the years, and, she says, "every owner put something different in."

Her advice to those who would like to give it a try? Find a contractor you can work with, and keep a sense of humor. "My contractor's gone crazy about the house," she says. "He's just as nuts about it as I am." She went through three or four contractors, however, before she found the right one.

"You need someone who thinks like you and wants to preserve the house," she says. "Don't take 'it isn't possible' for an answer."

Also, she advises, "call in friends Huck Finn-style to paint. Tell them, 'I'll feed you, and I just happen to be painting.'"

If you're going

Hilton's finished product, along with the 11 other buildings open for the tour, will be on view Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tickets for the tour are $10 and are available at the Pacific Grove Chamber of Commerce in advance or on the day of the tour. The inns are open only from 1 to 4 p.m.

Comfortable walking shoes are advised, and homeowners and inn owners ask that no interior photographs be taken. Tour brochures with a description of each house and a map of their locations will be distributed with tickets. For more information, call 373-3304.

— THE GROVE HOMESCAPES —

Looking back over the past 30 years, it's amazing to think how much has changed within our lives, while Pacific Grove seems so little changed. The butterflies return, the children march, and Pacific Grove retains the hometown charm that brought our family into the streets all those years ago.

Time, of course, does change the things and places around us, and it is a testament to the hard work of our friends and neighbors in Pacific Grove that we recognize the city of our childhood photographs.

When we transformed the Grove Laundry into The Grove Homescapes, we kept the history of our town in mind. It's gratifying to us that many of you have taken The Grove into your hearts as an example of what's right with Pacific Grove today.

Though our days at Forest Grove Elementary are long past and we won't be marching down Lighthouse again, we congratulate this years' "Butterfly Kids" for celebrating the history of a town we are proud to call home.

Keeley's first bill signed into law called small progress for gun safety

By PAUL WOLF

In a legislative success he hopes will be the first of many, Assemblyman Fred Keeley, D-Boulder Creek, announced that Gov. Pete Wilson has signed into law his bill that toughens standards for the safe storage of guns.

Fred Keeley

Assembly Bill 491 would impose criminal liability on gun owners who leave guns unattended if minors under 16 harm themselves or others with the weapon. The previous law stipulated minors under 14.

Keeley aid Gary Shallcross admitted that the bill, although important, constituted "small progress" on the issue of gun safety.

A spokesperson for the Monterey County Sheriff's Department could not recall an incident in recent memory that would have been covered by the amended law but not the prior legislation.

Nor could Deputy DA John Sarsfield, who said "these kinds of cases don't come up often."

Keeley, meanwhile, spoke of the lift he felt in having his first bill signed by the governor. "It's like having your first child or something." he said.

Wilson signed the Child Safety Gun Storage Act on Sept. 24. It had passed the Assembly 43-33.

"The idea of this bill is prevention and education," Keeley said. "When people buy guns, they will stop and see this notice posted and say, 'Oh, yes, I have to keep this gun under lock and key.'"

Immediately on AB 491's heels was the second bill of Keeley's signed into law — AB 1116, which estalishes a new process by which dentists trained outside of the U.S. become licensed in California.

About the gun-safety bill, Keeley said he has received support on the issue from police officials, district attorneys and educators. It is well-understood, the assemblyman said, that "teens do not usually buy, steal or borrow weapons from outside of the household, but find them at home."

Keeley described crime prevention as one of his three key priorities, along with environmental protection and education.

Keeley has another bill, AB 963, that is awaiting a signature by Wilson. The bill would establish a program, run by the Department of Justice, to reduce gang and other youth violence. Three million dollars would go to the project, which would direct "community-based and nonprofit organizations" to step up efforts to deal with the problem. The bill passed the Assembly 68-7.

Carmelite Ed Jordan tapped for state transportation post

Carmelite Edward Jordan, the retired chairman and CEO of Consolidated Railroad Corporation, was appointed by Gov. Pete Wilson to the "High Speed Rail Authority" Sept. 18.

Created in 1996 by state legislation, the authority is charged with developing a statewide rail service.

Jordan, a former Carmel planning commissioner, was appointed by Wilson to the California Transportation Commission in 1995, and currently serves as chairman.

Jordan served as president of the United States Railroad Association from 1974 to 1975, where he created a plan reorganizing eight northeastern bankrupt railroads, which became Conrail.

Presbyterians oust their pastor, search for healing

Minnesota minister called to counsel Carmel church

By KIRSTIE WILDE

THE RULING elders of Carmel Presbyterian Church are about to get an earful on Saturday from a minister flying in from Minnesota to help them turn a congregation in chaos into a "place where it's safe to be real."

Jeff Van Vonderen, a counseling pastor of a 6,000-member Christian church in Minneapolis, has also been asked to preach to the congregation on Sunday, but the sermon will not be titled "It's time to forgive, forget, and pretend everything is OK."

"It's far too late for that," he told The Pine Cone. "The leaders of the church have to stop worrying about public relations, and start learning to lead."

Pastor dismissed

Years of controversy at Carmel Presbyterian came to a head last Sunday when the congregation voted 189 to 144 to remove pastor Jon Wilson, who had been their minister for almost six years.

Allan Erickson, spokesman for the church, confirmed that the congregation decided to pay Wilson accrued vacation until October 31, and that substitute ministers will deliver the sermons until a new pastor can be found. Wilson will be allowed to stay in his church-owned home until next July. They also want him to repay $10,000 the church lent him to settle a lawsuit brought by a parishioner who charged Wilson with slander.

"I am sorry and saddened that it didn't work out," Wilson wrote to The Pine Cone. "However I have learned to see a crisis as an opportunity and am currently looking at other options where my gifts and abilities match the congregation."

Four hours of debate preceded Sunday's vote, during which 34 people spoke for and against the pastor. Several people were in tears after the vote. Others said they were relieved the fight was finally over. One vowed to pursue Wilson's case until he is barred from the Presbyterian ministry altogether.

Few would speak on-the-record, though, saying that the church had asked everyone to keep quiet about the controversy and not speak to the media. That, according to Van Vonderen, is exactly the wrong way to deal with the crisis in the church.

"A real ugly truth is better than image management," he said. "It's too late to worry about looking bad in the community. The world is going to have a better impression of the church if the church would get real, than if the church continues to hide its issues."

Van Vonderen has been through this before, in his career as a "consultant on church and family wellness." He worked with a Danville church last February, after its pastor was tainted by scandal. He tells the story of another church in South Dakota, where the minister was stealing from the treasury. "He was a genuine bad guy, running roughshod over the congregation," said Van Vonderen. "The board of elders were afraid of him, and couldn't confront him.

"They flew me out there, to get everybody in the same room and force them to deal with the problems in a healthy, straightforward way," he said. That's what Van Vonderen has been asked to do on Saturday, during an all-day retreat with the elders of Carmel Presbyterian church. "I don't know whether the pastor there is a wolf devouring the sheep, or if a mob is trying to run a good man out," he said. "What I do know is the real issue: the church leaders didn't do their jobs. They should have dealt with the problems openly long ago . . . instead of allowing gossip, fear and anger to boil over into the mess they had on Sunday."

Jon Wilson

'The Lord took us to the woodshed on this one.'

— Parishioner

Van Vonderan's fee is $800 per day, but he says nobody has talked to him about compensation yet. His plane fare will be taken care of, he says, and if the church elders decide his tough counseling services are too expensive, he'll just head down to Fishermen's Wharf, have a nice seafood dinner, and go on his way.

Looking for a lesson

Several of the church members who spoke to The Pine Cone this week expressed anger, hostility, even rage about how the Jon Wilson controversy was handled during the past few months. Others were looking for a spiritual lesson from the painful years of conflict at Carmel Presbyterian.

"The Lord took us to the woodshed this time," said one. "He wanted us to know that gossip is death, and if you have a problem with someone, you have to work it out face-to-face. Christians aren't that different from other folks, and churches are a lot like families. We all need help, sometimes, to solve our problems."

One of the members who voted against Wilson said, "It was not win or lose — everybody lost."

Expansion plans

Jon Wilson had big plans to expand Carmel Presbyterian with a Community Life Center off Rio Rd. at the mouth of Carmel Valley. His vision was called "grandiose" and "empire building" by his critics. But the church still has an option to buy the property near Carmel Middle School, and Wilson's removal was called "just a blip in the road" to expansion by Erickson.

"It could be a huge facility that would benefit all ages," he told The Pine Cone. "We could have a preschool, hot lunches for seniors, a gymnasium and a place to show films. There are some brilliant and energetic people in this church who would like to see it happen, and I feel privileged to work with them."

Salvation Army expects fallout from welfare reform

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

ONE KEY social service organization predicts a heavier case load to be the result of a recently approved state welfare reform bill.

"I'm going to see an increase in clients," said Carmen Hernandez, social services director for the Salvation Army.

That organization is planning to expand in order to provide more services for the homeless including providing more showers, computer training and resume preparation.

The state welfare reform legislation, matching last year's federal act, limits the length of time that the able-bodied can collect welfare.

The idea is to help people prepare for jobs. Ironically, the Salvation Army has been working on its expansion plans for the past three years — before the Welfare Reform Act was passed.

Other area groups providing shelter and food to needy families will also be called upon to step up their efforts.

The Salvation Army wants to be able to accommodate all the people that need its help, but organization leaders have to wait to find out how many new people that means, Hernandez said.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

For the first time since its start in 1974, there is a surplus in a government fund that insures pensions of individual companies. The Pension Benefit Guarantee Corporation reported assets of $12 billion at the end of 1996, about $900 million more than needed to cover obligations. The change from previous deficits was credited to the highter premiums companies must pay, investment income, and the absence of big losses from pension plan failures.

Kitty Carlisle Hart stepped down in 1996 after running New York State's Council on the Arts for twenty years. But she hasn't been idle. The singer-actress put together a one-woman show for New York audiences. In song and story, her show reflects her career of more than 60 years on stage, screen and TV. One of her earliest performances was in the 1935 Marx brothers film, "A Night At The Opera." Ms Hart may take her one-woman show on a national tour.

SIERRA CLUB

■ Project reapproval did not "include conditions limiting certain (building) sites to one-story" and failed to "analyze visual impacts."

The suit also criticizes the supervisors for approving some lots with no designated use — including the ones that were previously designated for a hotel and commercial center rejected by the voters.

Taking it to court

"The County and (Rancho San Carlos Partnership) have challenged Measure M in court. Accordingly, the previous uses designated for these lots could be reinstated," said the Sierra Club lawsuit.

The suit also asks that the county be required to pay the Sierra Club's legal bills in bringing the suit.

Tom Gray of Rancho San Carlos could not be reached for comment about this particular lawsuit, but he has earlier stated that both the frog and the trout were extensively covered in the environmental impact report.

Tom Gray

'No impact'

"Furthermore, after the frog was listed, we went into formal consultation with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and received a nationwide permit, which says there's no impact from our project," he said.

He has also commented on viewshed protections, saying the design concept at Rancho San Carlos is to hide each home as much as possible from its neighbor, and protect everyone's views in perpetuity.

Bruce Dormody, whose family owns a 100-cabin resort on 1,200 acres adjacent to Rancho San Carlos, is a member of both groups that brought the new suit.

"Our cabins are densely clustered, which is what we've been hoping Rancho San Carlos would do," he said.

Little Napoli gets the go-ahead to add twenty additional seats

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CARMEL Planning Commission overturned its earlier decision to halt the expansion plans of Little Napoli on Dolores Street.

Voting 7-0, the commission decided that a new food ordinance freezing restaurant growth didn't apply to Little Napoli because that restaurant was increasing its square footage to accomodate the new seats. Twenty new seats will be added to the 28-seat restaurant.

"I think anyone who has had dinner there will appreciate the change," said Commissioner Jack Gorry.

The city really doesn't have evidence of too many restaurants in town, commissioners decided.

The commission has already turned down two other restaurants from increasing their seating because of the limit on the number of restaurants on Ocean Avenue set up by Measure H.

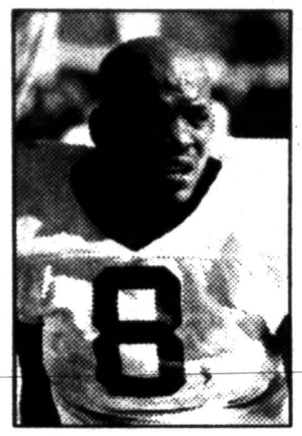
Padres shut down Beyah, but still fall in 30-10 game

By JON BENNER

ALTHOUGH CARMEL High played perhaps its best half of football this season and held the Stevenson steam train, Bubba Beyah, under the century mark, the Padres came out on the short end, losing 30-10 to the Pirates.

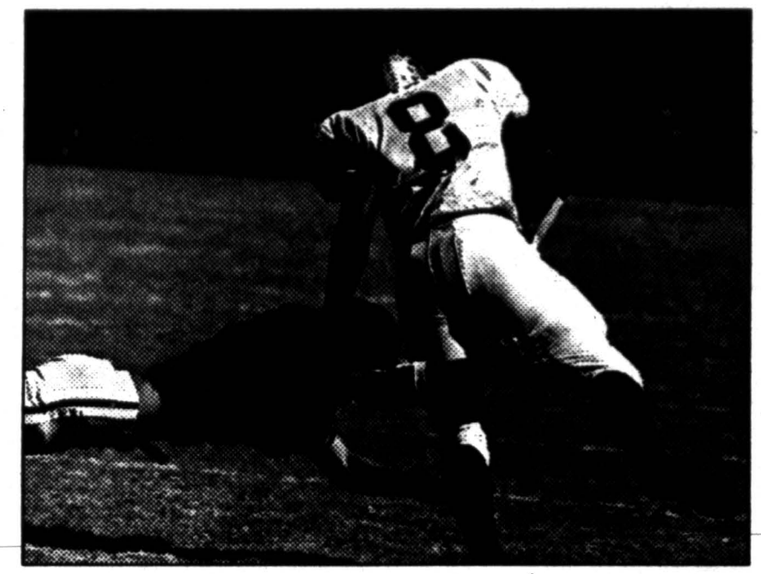


Bubba Beyah

On Saturday, behind the efforts of JoJo Grewell, the Padres (1-3) took a 10-0 lead with them to halftime, but that lead and the Padres' momentum quickly dissolved when the Pirates Paul Simonsen returned a punt 80 yards for a touchdown in the third quarter.

Beyah, who has been labeled the "most feared offensive threat in the league" by his coaches, gained only 66 yards against the Padres' defense, but other Pirate runners picked up the slack by rushing for 158 yards.

In only four games, Beyah has stampeded for a total of 564 yards, an average of 141 yards per game.



PHOTOS/COLE THOMPSON

RLS running back Bubba Beyah leaves a Carmel defender gasping for air while rushing for 66 yards last Saturday.

"He's what makes our team good," said varsity defensive coach David Miller.

For Beyah, the football journey began at the age of 8 when he joined a Pop Warner team in his childhood hometown of Santa Cruz.

"I've grown up with football," said Beyah. "It's a great sport and I've grown to love it."

Now co-captain of the undefeated Pirates (4-0), Beyah has been the team's leading rusher ever since he joined the varsity squad as a sophomore, and he's also no slouch on defense, earning MTAL all-league honors last season while starting both ways.

"He hits really hard on defense and he runs really hard on offense," said Miller. "This year, Bubba's a super worker. He is a leader through his positive attitude and model behavior and he demands the best from all of the players."

To strengthen his skills, Beyah attended a football camp this past summer at Washington State University, and he emerged as the "Outstanding Defensive Player" of the camp.

Along with football, both baseball and basketball also compete for Beyah's talents.

He plays both an infield and outfield position for the baseball team and stars as a guard for the hoops team, but his passion lies on the gridiron.

"I really like to hit," he said. "My favorite part of football is the contact aspect."

Hard decisions

Although Beyah is a Seaside resident and could have attended Seaside High, he personally decided to take his skills to Stevenson.

"He made the right hard choice," said Miller. "He paid the price in terms of losing friends who went to Seaside High and having to work harder academically, but he made the right decision."

Because of his prowess, Beyah is the only student who has ever conducted a pre-game talk, a privilege that is traditionally reserved for the coaching staff.

"Bubba has great maturity and judgment," said Miller. "He talked to the team about commitment and behavior. He's made the right choices and in the process he's become a mature senior."

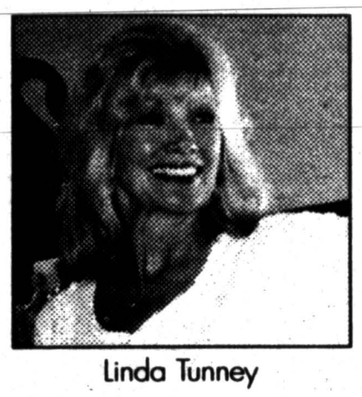
Hogan's Alley

By BILL HOGAN

Thanks to Linda Tunney, every kid's a winner

LINDA TUNNEY is a busy woman. As coordinator of the AT&T Pebble Beach Junior Golf Association, a non-profit association located in Carmel, she manages a large staff of people who provide a multitude of activities and services for more than 1,500 Monterey Peninsula youngsters.



Linda Tunney

Surprising? It was to me, because I thought Junior Golf was little more than an occasional tournament and trophies for the winners. Not so.

The AT&T Pebble Beach Junior Golf Association offers over 10 tournaments, a half-dozen clinics, sessions of five lessons per child from over 60 local pros, a regular newsletter and much more. Perhaps their most clever service is a check-out program for cutdown clubs, that operates similar to a library, where kids can borrow clubs and then return them once they are outgrown.

How much does the program cost? Nothing. It's free for boys and girls between 7 and 17. How can this be?

"Private donations," said Tunney. "Plus, we have over 300 wonderful volunteers and a hard-working board of directors."

With the recent influx of youth attracted to the game because of the Tiger Woods phenomenon, this program teaches the necessary skills and expected behavior for youngsters on a golf course. In fact, the kids must pass an etiquette test before they are allowed to play in a tournament.

"This is a wonderful program," said Tunney. "We provide discipline, respect for the game and respect for people."

Perhaps equally important were the $25,000 in scholarships given to graduating high school seniors in 1997, and over $161,000 since the program's inception in 1991. A fantastic achievement by a dedicated bunch of volunteers.

"We do it because we love kids," concluded Tunney. "And because they have a wonderful time." Not to mention, kids can learn a game of honesty and integrity that they can enjoy for the rest of their lives. All compliments of generous people like Linda Tunney.

From The Clubhouse: The AT&T Pebble Beach Junior Golf Association fund-raising tournament will be held at Pebble Beach Golf Links on Dec. 13. Call 625-1555 for your invitation.

OPINION

Editorial

What the population forecast means

Some Carmelites were shocked to learn this week that their small village is projected to grow in population by 13 per cent over the next 23 years. That's what the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments is predicting, anyway.

Are there large apartment blocks planned in some hidden corner of town? Will adjoining neighborhoods be annexed? Is Donald Trump planning a skyscraper condominium on Ocean Avenue?

These questions arise because the simple fact about population growth is that it doesn't happen unless new places for people to live are built — or existing homes and apartments are expanded.

Carmel does have a very small amount of construction underway. A four-unit apartment building, for example, is taking shape right across the street from The Pine Cone offices. A few vacant lots are scattered here and there in town and those certainly will be built on someday. But large-scale population increases are hard to fathom considering how strict the town's general plan and zoning code are.

City Administrator Jere Kersnar says the figures quoted this week are overstatements. The town will grow a little, he said, but not as much as the figures released this week claim.

Instead of being shocked, Carmelites should be reassured. The town's virtually-no-growth policies are working and will continue to do so. Even AMBAG's exaggerated predictions show a Carmel population of less than 5,000 souls well into the next century.

Often "developers" are compared to some kind of predatory beast that devours an unwilling victim despite its pitiful protests and vigorous — but always futile — attempts to protect itself. But that's not the way it works. The "victim" — the public — actually is a powerful political animal that controls its own fate.

The plain fact is: the only growth that a community has to accept is the minimum amount guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution's protection of private property rights. And that ain't much, folks. All other growth is optional and can only be done if the elected representatives of the people vote to allow it.

That's why anybody who wants to build more than the minimum on their property has to agree to give all sorts of things to the public in exchange for a permit. Access easements across private property? That can usually be arranged. Permanent dedication of open space on most of your property? No problem. Traffic impact fees? Those will be paid. Downzoning of your property from commercial to residential, or from multi-family to single-family, or from single-family to agricultural? Usually the property owner can only resist such moves by lobbying his neighbors — through their representatives — not to impose them on his land.

There is nothing inevitable about growth. Nothing except the simple fact that growth is necessary if ever-increasing numbers of humans are to have a decent shot at shelter, jobs, education, and health care. Growth happens because millions of people — rightly or wrongly —believe it will benefit them in the form of a place to live, a way to make money, a place to have fun.

That story is also told in the AMBAG population forecast. Cities like Soledad, King City, Greenfield and Salinas all are predicted to undergo huge population increases in the next quarter-century. And those predictions are not based on guesswork or impersonal statistical theorems.

Each of those cities has decided to grow — on purpose! Most of the citizens of those towns want more houses and shopping centers and light-industrial districts. And they'll get them. The developers will be welcomed with open arms. Highway 101 through the Salinas Valley will start to look the way it does through Morgan Hill and San Jose. But it won't be done against the people's wishes.

Meanwhile here at home the vigilance of the citizens will keep out virtually all growth, no matter what AMBAG says.

Carmel Valley's beauty

To the Editor:

Reading your editorial of Sept. 19th, I was reminded of a poem I had written twenty years earlier, shortly after I arrived in this area. I was not sure then and am not now, either, of what a proper solution might be, but I do know there is a problem!

CARMEL VALLEY

Carmel Valley, beautiful trap
Pretty town upon the map
What is it you have to hide
Shielded from the world outside?
Gnarled old trees and green-brown hills,
Valleys, dales and old-time frills
Please don't change us, this you plead,
Never mind what may be need.
Acre plots and bigger lots, Fine for "haves" . . .
Too bad, if not.

Measure B an 'unjust tax'

Dear Editor:

Citizens of Carmel-by-the-Sea have always taken pride in its city's providing services that protect the lives of our villagers. Measure 'B' wrongfully taxes property owners for a cost that should be in the budget. Voters need to be aware of what they are giving up if they approve Measure B.

Carmel's budget now attempts to set an unfair precedent in moving a customary budget item directly to the property owners. Ambulance service was fought for and awarded in court and we are thus rightly entitled to it. To say this parcel tax is 'a secure funding base' is an irrational excuse when it can be paid for with our already adequate base of property and commercial district taxes.

Since our opposition and without any

City Talk

Focus on ambulance: second of 2 parts

Editor's note: This column was submitted to The Pine Cone as an educational service. However, the newspaper will gladly publish letters by citizens both supporting and opposing Measure B.*

By KEN WHITE
Mayor, Carmel-by-the-Sea

IN LAST week's "City Talk" we spoke of the history of your Carmel Regional Fire Ambulance service and the events which have led up to Measure B being placed on the November ballot.

Today I would like to address the negotiations we have been working on with the Monterey County Board of Supervisors to resolve the differences between us. These negotiations have required us to explain some of the unique characteristics of our city and its population and the value to all of us of our local emergency medical care providers.

For the past two-and-a-half years, members of the Carmel Regional Fire Ambulance board and members of the city council have attempted to negotiate a solution to the lack of county funding for our emergency medical service, but the pleas for fair treatment have received little support from the county government.

When the county initially implemented the property tax assessment for emergency medical service in 1989, its total collection from that source was slightly under $1 million. At that time, 45 percent of the EMS budget was apportioned to direct support for ambulances on the street and 55 percent was apportioned to administration and training.

Today's County EMS budget has grown to $2 million. The assessment revenues to support this budget have grown as well, but are expected to reach only $1.5 million this year. It is significant to note a rather dramatic change in the county's EMS spending since 1989: Of today's $2 million budgeted amount, only 27 percent is assigned to support ambulances on the street, while the administration and training budgets have grown to 73 percent of the total.

The taxpayer-financed subsidy for the CRFA has been declining, the county's administrative costs have risen dramatically and continue to rise. If Carmel-by-the-Sea residents wish to retain local control and provide a stable funding base, we must resolve this problem.

Because of this continued financial squeeze put on our emergency medical care and ambulance service, your city council voted unanimously to place before the voters a ballot measure to achieve local control. You might be interested to know that a number of years ago, voters of the Carmel Valley Fire District approved a nearly identical ballot measure allowing a maximum $75 assessment per residential parcel.

Our efforts to convince Monterey County's Board of Supervisors of the importance of maintaining our CRFA have included a description of a number of characteristics of the village of Carmel-by-the-Sea. These characteristics include: uneven pattern of streets, lack of street lighting in the neighborhoods, absence of house numbers/street addresses and the intimate knowledge of these idiosyncrasies gained over time by local ambulance personnel.

Add to this mix the very large percentage of elderly in our city and the high number of people living alone in their homes. We show a very different situation from others areas of the county. For these reasons, we appealed to the supervisors to reach an amicable solution so that the CRFA could continue serving our citizens without running its budget at a deficit.

At its September meeting, the city council, in an effort to join a partnership with its residents, unanimously passed a resolution by which the city will contribute $100,000 annually for the purpose of holding the property assessment as low as possible. To give you an example, if Measure B had passed for the 1997-98 CRFA budget and the Council had contributed its $100,000 share, a single-family dwelling in the city would have paid less than $15 for this entire year as its share — about $1.25 per month to ensure first-rate ambulance service and low response times! The county's provider will guarantee us an 8-minute-or-less response 90 percent of the time; our CRFA can give us a response of under five minutes 90 percent of the time.

I would like to take this opportunity to publicly thank the members of our ad hoc emergency care/ambulance committee who came together in early 1996 and who held many meetings over a span of 14 months to explore this issue at the request of the city council.

We are indebted to Clayton Anderson, Bob Condry, Howard Herning, Jennifer Hill, Elinor Laiolo, Ed Stark, Leslie Crayne-Stark, Pat Sippel and Noel Van Bibber for the time, talent and energy they devoted to this important issue.

Carmel Performing Arts Festival

First week was SRO at some events; second offers array of music, dance, poetry, theater and comedy

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

DR. SCHAFFER AND MR. STERN — Two Guys Dancing About Math, is a family-oriented, laugh-filled dance about arithmetic which can be seen at 5 and 7:30 p.m. Sunday at Sunset Theater.

GET OUT your day-timers, and pencil in your choice of performances for the second week of the Carmel Performing Arts Festival.

The first week saw a mixed audience count at the various theater, music, dance and poetry performances all over town.

The Pilobolus Too dance ensemble played to a full Sunset Theater house; "Coriolanus" was well attended both Saturday and Sunday at the Outdoor Forest Theater; Karrin Allyson, jazz singer, thrilled a packed Jazz Store at The Crossroads; Bard Sherman and his drummer sideman delighted a number of picnickers and listeners in Devendorf Park; Sha Sha Higby's extraordinarily costumed performance of Balinese-based wordless storytelling enthralled a good-sized audience at the Carmel Ballet Academy; while Ric Masten, poet, and Todd Jefferson Moore in his one-man performance of 18 characters commenting on the Pacific Northwest timberland played to very small, but enthusiastically appreciative audiences at the Scout House and Sunset Theater, respectively.

And this touches on only a few of the 19 separate events which were staged in and around Carmel.

A BLEND of rottweiler and Labrador retriever, Charlie, like the fragrance of the same name, is all feminine charm.

It comes as no surprise, then, that as a female Charlie Shanks certainly felt no compunction about opening a hostess gift in the guest room of her Carmel home last week — while the guest was out. An enticing box of six liqueur-filled chocolate truffles seemed just the thing as a late afternoon snack — just a little something to tide her over until dinner time.

After an emergency call to the vet and treatment by her Mom, Line (pronounced Lena), Charlie's world righted itself, and it was made clear that chocolates, even for the best hostess in the world, are off-limits from now on.

This week on Carmel Beach, a fully recovered Charlie romped happily and played catch-the-boogie-board as her visiting uncle Espen from Oslo, Norway caught a few waves.

Friendly to a fault, Charlie posed beguilingly for The Pine Cone before racing back into the bracing Pacific.

Now 10 months old, Charlie was adopted from the SPCA when she was merely two — yet another Carmelite who has found happiness after a brief stay in a halfway house.

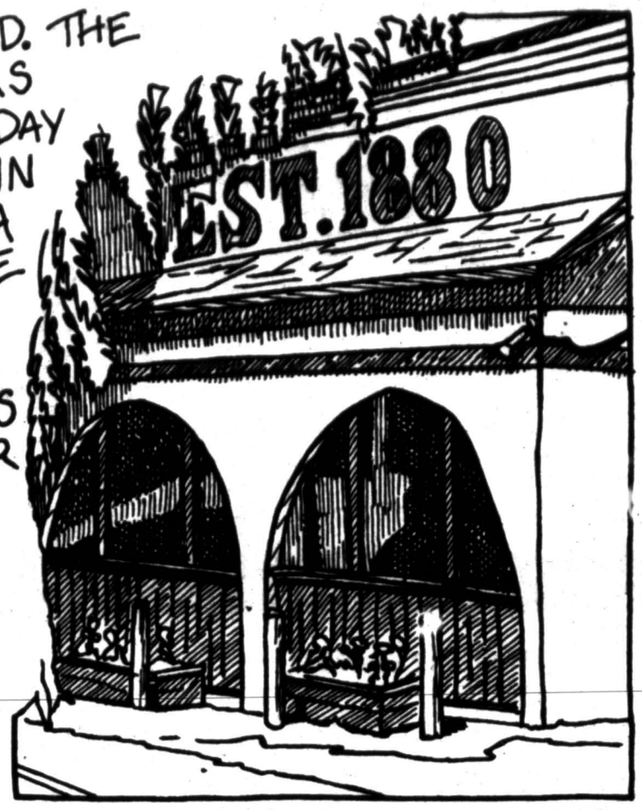
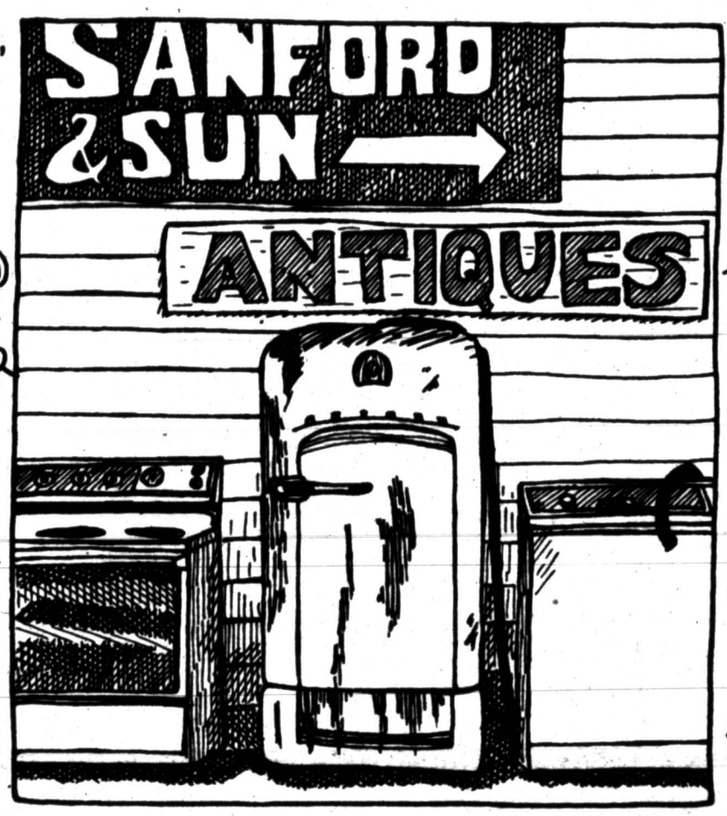
WE'D GOOFED. THE FEEDLOT WAS CLOSED THE DAY WE ARRIVED IN TRES PINOS. A FELLOW AT THE GAS STATION SUGGESTED THE INN TRES PINOS, A "FOUR STAR RESTAURANT." I DIDN'T ASK ON WHAT SCALE, BUT GUESSED HE MEANT GOOD.

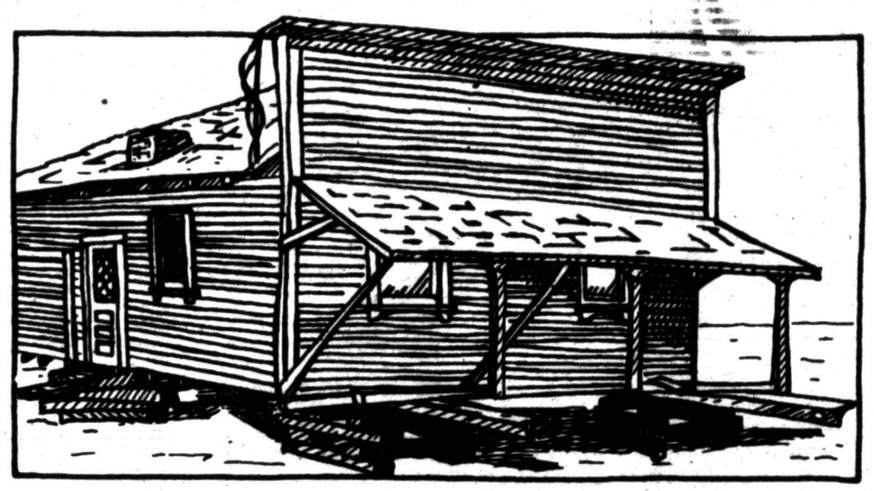


THE INN IS A 100 YEAR OLD ROADHOUSE WITH WHITE TABLECLOTHS, FRIENDLY FOLKS, AND GOOD FOOD. I'D FORGOT ABOUT BEEF. WE HAD A GRILLED CHICKEN SANDWICH ON SOURDOUGH AND A CAESAR SALAD WITH HOUSE-MADE CROUTONS. WE THREW ON A COUPLE MORE STARS FOR A TOTAL OF SIX.

ON THE MENU, LOCAL FAVORITES ARE DENOTED BY A 🌲. THESE LOCALS (POP. 500) ARE A DIVERSE LOT, GOING FOR EVERYTHING FROM GRILLED VEGGIES TO A "SIX-SHOOTER OF BULLETS"- JALAPENOS STUFFED WITH CHORIZO AND CHEESE.



ACROSS THE STREET, SANFORD AND SUN APPEARED TO BE THE PLACE TO PICK UP SOME DISTRESSED MAJOR APPLIANCES. SANFORD WAS ALSO CLOSED, BUT I WAS BETTING HE WAS A SIX-SHOOTER OF BULLETS MAN.



OUTSIDE TRES PINOS IS THE SAN BENITO CO. HISTORICAL PARK, A DUSTY COLLECTION OF OLDTIME BUILDINGS. THE PARK, MUCH LIKE THE DAYTRIP COLUMN ITSELF, APPEARS TO BE A WORK IN PROGRESS.

NEXT TIME: "THE ROAD."

The Pine Cone arts and entertainment editors urge readers to consult either the Calendar in today's issue, or the official program of the festival, which is available at newsstands throughout the village.

This week's random quick-picks — which by no means are inclusive of all the remarkable fare available tonight and through next Friday — are intended only to pique readers' interest:

Tomorrow Tandy Beal dances "Nightlife," a full-length solo performance one time only at 7:30 p.m. at Sunset Theater, San Carlos at Ninth.

NEW YORK POET MAYO SIMON can be heard at 8 p.m. tomorrow, 2 and 5 p.m. Sunday and 5 p.m. Wednesday at Scout House.

End of season for Pac Rep

Pacific Repertory closes out its season Sunday with performances of "Romeo and Juliet" at 2 p.m. at the Golden Bough Theatre and "Coriolanus" at 8 p.m. tonight, tomorrow and Sunday at the Outdoor Forest Theater; and "The Compleat Wrks of Wllm Shakspr (Abridged)" tomorrow at 2 p.m. at the Circle Theatre (all non-pass events). These are the last chances this season to be enriched by Pac Rep's offerings.

CET/Staff Players presents Marcia Gambrell (Hovick) in "Voices from the Aegean Sea," her original monologues of eight Greek tragedy characters at 8 p.m. next Friday in the Indoor Forest Theater.

As well as poet Ric Masten returning with his final performance, "The Arts and the Leftovers," late this afternoon at 5 p.m. at the Scout House, Mission at Eighth, New York poet Mayo Simon appears tomorrow at 8 p.m., both 2 and 5 p.m. Sunday and at 5 p.m. Wednesday at Scout House with his poetry about coping with cancer and life, which he calls "Support Group;" and Bridget Hanley does James Dickey theatrical poems at 5 p.m. tomorrow and 2 p.m. Sunday at the Indoor Forest Theatre.

Math to make you laugh

"Dr. Schaffer and Mr. Stern: Two Guys Dancing About Math," promises to be a humorous, family-oriented program of fun at 5 and 7:30 p.m. Sunday at Sunset Theater. Attendees are invited to come an hour early to play math games before the show.

"Spectordance" performs contemporary dance inspired by Monterey Bay scenery and text of Robinson Jeffers' poetry, which will be back-projected during this one-time-only show at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at Sunset Theater — and the Carmel Ballet Company presents "The Red Shoes" at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, also at Sunset Theater.

The Carmel Youth Center and the Crossroads Shopping Center are the two venues tomorrow for award-winning California Cajun Orchestra which welcomes spectators to get up and dance. The 1 p.m. Crossroads show is a free event, while the 5 p.m. Youth Center performance is a full concert.

Modern jazz and classical piano music by David Rice can be heard at 5 p.m. Wednesday and at 5 and 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Carmel Woman's Club, San Carlos between Ninth and Tenth.

The Unicorn Theatre returns to its original home at the Carl Cherry Center for the Arts tonight at 5 with "Brilliant Traces." — Fourth at Guadalupe

THE CALIFORNIA CAJUN ORCHESTRA expects their audience to get up and dance during performances. A full concert will be given at 5 p.m. tomorrow at the Carmel Youth Center, Fifth Ave. between Junipero and Torres. A free sampling can be heard outdoors at 1 p.m. tomorrow at The Crossroads Shopping Center.

Free events, too

Don't miss the free musical events all over town, too, which include Mary Anne Randl singing easy-listening, jazz, bebop, and Dixieland to piano accompaniment at 6 tonight at the Carmel Art Association Gallery, Dolores between Fifth and Sixth, where refreshments will be served. Come in and listen while sitting, or wander about the gallery. See the Greek Village Dancers of Monterey Peninsula tomorrow at 1 p.m. in the Barnyard Shopping Village. MUSIC

The local club scene: Live music promotion a risky proposition at best

Plugged In

By Stephen L. Vagnini

I'VE SAID IT a thousand times ... promoting live music in nightclubs on the Monterey Peninsula is a risky proposition at best. It is not that we don't like or support live music here on the peninsula ... simply put, there is just too much going on in Monterey County and on the Central Coast all throughout the year. Music festivals, food festivals, concert series et. al. all compete with musical offerings served up by local clubs.

In the last few years blues and jazz have dominated the clubscape. However, lately rock 'n' roll (as always) has been showing some signs of life. Doc's Nightclub, under new ownership for over a year now, books blues and reggae regularly with the exception of monthly gigs by rock 'n' roll groups Lovers & Strangers and The Uninvited. Tonight, Doc's presents more rock 'n' roll with the return of Celtic rockers, Tempest. The San Francisco Bay area-based band, formed in 1988 by Norwegian musician Lief Sorbye, used to make regular trips to the Monterey area but tonight's appearance is their first in over a year. The quintet has released a steady flow of well-received albums playing traditional folk material from the British Isles and Europe with a modern rock 'n' roll sensibility. Sorbye plays his trademark doublenecked mandolin (as well as flute and tinwhistle) and is joined by fiddler Michael Mullen and a capable rhythm section. Music starts at 9:30 p.m. and there is no cover charge.

Whitey's Place, under the guidance of owner/booker Jeff White, first established itself in 1995 as a viable music venue promoting acid jazz and blues bands. But the Pacific Grove Restaurant and Sports Bar (located in the American Tin Cannery) has in '97 become a hot spot for rock 'n' roll and the younger crowd. Regular appearances by Los Angeles groups Mother Superior and Freight Train (by way of Carmel) are de rigueur as well as appearances by local rock acts Human Doings and The Karma Band. Tonight, one of the better original rock 'n' roll bands on the Central Coast, Iguana Jive, performs at Whitey's Place. Snappy tunes, clever lyrics and tight harmonies have helped establish the Chico-based quartet as a band to keep an eye on. The group's debut CD, Off the Floor, has received local air-play on KMBY and regular gigs up and down the coast have furthered the group's popularity. On Saturday guitarist John Moezzi and Jedi play Whitey's. Music starts at 9:30 p.m. There is no cover charge — however a two-drink minimum is enforced during live music.

Other clubs now promoting live rock 'n' roll in Monterey include Viva's on Alvarado Street, Monterey Billiards on Washington Street and the Blue Fin Billiards on Cannery Row. The return of original rock 'n' roll to the Planet Gemini (also on Cannery Row) on Wednesday nights could very well be the catalyst that brings the genre to prominence in Monterey once again. With arguably the best overall lighting, stage, and sound on the Monterey Peninsula, Planet Gemini is the perfect room for live music. Owner/manager Anthony Lane, the first local booker to bring us The Counting Crows, Eleven and The Uninvited (before they received major popularity) has teamed up with Mockingbird guitarist Steve Kramer and the future shows potential. "Rock 'N' Wednesdays" will be co-promoted by new rock radio station K-ROCK (92.7 FM) and will "break new bands into the area."

The weekly event kicked off on a good note a few weeks back with '70s superstar Dale Bozzio (former singer for Missing Persons) and continues Wednesday (Oct. 15) with '70s guitar hero Pat Travers. Local rockers Mockingbird will serves as house band and will co-headline on Oct. 22 with another promising local band Gel. If anyone has the ability to bring good original rock 'n' roll to Monterey on a regular basis it is Planet Gemini owner Lane. Hopefully the emphasis will be on new and upcoming acts rather than "stars from the past."

All that Jazz

Less then a month after her captivating performance before a jam-packed audience at the Monterey Jazz Festival, San Francisco jazz singer Madeline Eastman returns to the Monterey area to perform at the Lobby Lounge at the Inn at Spanish Bay with the Helcio Milito Trio. One of the better-kept secrets on the peninsula, Brazilian percussionist Milito performs weekly from Thursday to Sunday with keyboardist Weber Drummond and various special guest artists. This Thursday and Sunday John Purcell will perform with the group on saxello and on Friday and Saturday Eastman handles the chores.

Madeline Eastman

Born and raised in San Francisco, Eastman is a "straight-ahead" jazz vocalist with a fresh and daring approach. A regular at all the best rooms in San Francisco and at major jazz festivals, Eastman is considered to be one of the better jazz singers on the scene today. The trio plays Brazilian and American jazz from 7 to 11 p.m. There is no cover charge. Also at the Inn at Spanish Bay guitarist Geoff Stewart plays dinner music every Wednesday; pianist Dick Whittington performs every Thursday and Sunday evening; and pianist Jan Deneau plays every Friday and Saturday. Call 647-7500 for info.

Saturday night at the Jazz Store, the folks at KRML will present a rare double billing featuring the Larry Baskett Quartet and the Dick Conte Trio. Baskett was a regular performer on trumpet and flugelhorn in jazz clubs in San Francisco during the '50s and in 1962 he took a 22-year sabbatical leave-of-absence from playing his horn. In 1984 he returned to playing and he was joined occasionally by the great Chet Baker. On his latest CD release, Chalice, Baskett evokes a style reminiscent of Baker and is supported by guitarist Randy Vincent, bassist Chris Amber and Frank Phipps on euphonium. Pianist Dick Conte, a veteran jazz radio personality who has been playing clubs in San Francisco since the early '70s, will perform selections from their 1996 CD release, Yesterdays. Conte is backed by Bob Kaufman on drums and Chris Amber on bass.

Across the Monterey Bay at the Seascape Resort in Aptos promoter Sandy Shore has put together a nice lineup for her Indian Summer Music Festival. On two stages five bands will perform for $25 ($20 in advance). The eclectic lineup includes world-class percussionist Pete Escovedo; world music fusion artists Willie Royal on violin, guitarist Wolfgang "Lobo" Fink and others. Local comedian "Chicago Steve" Barkley will host the event which will take place from noon to 6 p.m. Tickets are available at Do Re Mi Music in Carmel or call 649-1223.

Also tonight, a special "preview concert" takes place at the Media Room, a new intimate venue located at 472 Lighthouse Ave. in Pacific Grove in the Grovescape Building. According to general manager Gary Hamada, the building is wired for recording. On Friday a recording concert will take place with guitarist Bruce Foreman, bassist Dennis Murphy and drummer David Thomas Morwood. Morwood, a New York City jazz player, is the new music director at the Media Room. The event is open to the public. Tickets are $25. Call 622-0535 for reservations. Seating is limited to 75.

MOVIES

What kind of water shortage are we running around here?

description of the New Year's Eve party The Inn at Spanish Bay has planned around the theme, "Travel Through the Galaxy."

THE mailer's descriptive sentence was this:

"Travel through the Galaxy with The Inn's hotel-wide gala, featuring celestial entertainment, and heavenly cuisine for an out-of-this-world evening that will send you into orbit."

BLEEEAGH!

And if this doesn't make you see stars and send you on your Milky Way, maybe this will:

THE TAB for this one-night romp is $650 for two people! (But that includes a room in which to sleep off whatever you need to sleep off, such as those cliches.)

But what the hefty sum does NOT include is the sales tax ($47.13), and the MANDATORY 15 percent "gratuity" ($104.57), which brings the total nudge up to $801.70! (Liquor is extra.)

QUESTION — Is a "gratuity" still a gratuity if it's mandatory?

Random House Dictionary (Second Edition, Unabridged) defines "gratuity" as:

"A gift of money, over and above payment due for service . . . Something given without claim or demand."

Webster's New Collegiate defines it:

"Something given voluntarily or beyond obligation."

THEREFORE, the answer to the question is — no, a "gratuity" is NOT a gratuity if it's mandatory.

So will P.B. Co. hereafter please refrain from use of the word "gratuity" when referring to a MANDATORY charge?

IT would clear the air a good deal for us nit-pickers.

However, if the company is bound and determined to collect an additional 15 percent above and beyond their printed prices, may we suggest they call it a "surcharge," or "shipping and handling," or "replacement insurance if your entree is lost in the mail."

OR perhaps they should come right out with it and call it a "Make Pebble Beach Co. Greener" fund.

Keep in mind these are all just suggestions. Nothing here is mandatory.

IN any event, should auld acquaintance be forgot, bon appetit! May the force be with you! And may the good Lord take a likin' . . . oh never mind.

TODAY'S QUOTE . . . Actress Khandi Alexander (of "ER" and "News-Radio"):

"Everyone in New York is unique, but in Los Angeles everyone looks like Barbie and Ken. Even the black people."

(SOME even spell "Candy" with a "Kh" and an "i" on the end.)

EXACTLY what kind of a water shortage are we running around here, anyway?

Residents are threatened with fines and the tortures of the damned if they don't cut back to make their lawns go brown, their flowers and vegetables shrivel, and their toilets flush far less often.

BUT at the same time, the Board of Supes is approving more and more water-guzzling new housing developments; a new CAR WASH is allowed to open up in Carmel Rancho WITHOUT a valid water permit and golf courses and tourists go merrily on scarfing down our water without missing a beat!

How can this be? Is this simply the RESIDENTS' water shortage, and all developers and tourist facilities and the tourists, themselves, are free to ignore it?

WE KNOW the Alfred E. Newman-like Board of Supervisors has never seen a big development plan it didn't just love — massive housing, golf courses, car washes, malls, etc. — so who is there with integrity and clout enough to rein them in?

Can their irresponsibility be allowed to turn this entire area into a parking lot and amusement park for tourists without one hot fight from fed-up residents?

APPARENTLY, we'll soon find out.

NEXT . . . What happened to those Letters to the Editors that literally DOZENS of people wrote to The Herald complaining about Knight-Ridder's shabby treatment of long-time Herald employees?

Not one of them has ever been printed by the paper!

IS this the dictatorial new ownership's way of telling the people of this area that only letters of praise will be accepted?

Certainly it is in the tradition of autocrats that criticism cannot be tolerated, lest passive bourgeois minds begin to THINK.

THUS, the patrician P. Anthony Ridder and Ziggy, the "working mom" sent in to oversee this particular stalag, must carefully screen letters to the editors to eliminate those with any signs of lack of adoration!

Must we now change the local daily's name from the Monterey County Bland to the "Monterey County Censor?" And will it completely eschew news in favor of sanitized communiques?

P. Anthony and Ziggy believe you'll love it. (Or else!)

P.S. — We have more on the not-so-great Knight-Ridder chain from a distinguished impartial national source, but we'll have to wait until next week with it.

See, we're running out of space, and it's one of our cardinal rules that this column must contain at least one iota of interesting news every week, even if we have to make it up, so it's time we get to that:

GENERAL STORE-Forge In the Forest restaurant at Junipero and Fifth in Carmel is about to join the stable of one of the Peninsula's highest-profile restaurateurs, according to Terrible Teri, the astounding detective.

That would be John Pisto, proprietor of Whaling Station Inn, Paradiso Trattoria, Domenico's On the Wharf, and Abalonetti Seafood Trattoria (also on the wharf).

IN addition, Pisto is well known for his television program, "Monterey's Cookin' with John Pisto."

When asked about Terrible Teri's excloo, Pisto said, "Where in the world did you hear that?"

(The Terrible One never tells.)

PRESSED to confirm or deny the sale, Pisto said, "No further comment."

Employees and a manager at the Carmel eatery scoffed and said, "Sounds like one of those wild rumors."

WITH such ringing confirmations, we're confident The Terrible One has, indeed, spilled beans that weren't supposed to be spilled yet!

But that's Terrible Teri for you — absolutely no shame!

Rare Finds on the Peninsula

Central Coast Computers

Central Coast Computers, headquartered on Dolores Street in Carmel, is the solution provider for Central Coast residents.

By customer request, Central Coast Computers now services Macs as well as PCs. Bring your equipment in, or have it repaired on-site.

"We can also upgrade and service mobile computers," explains owner Linda Sandidge. "We've given new focus to notebooks."

Located beneath the blue awning on Dolores between Seventh and Eighth, the company is famed for building computer systems that literally answer customers' needs. And they happily fill special-order requests, typically in one day.

Sales associate Mike Wecker remains on staff, able to answer any questions. New to the company are Eric Ades, a Mac technician with extensive experience, and Jeff Marshall, whose specialty is PCs.

See problems solved swiftly at Central Coast Computers. The team can be reached at 626-6885.

Monterey Mattress Co.

Take a look at the Monterey Mattress Marquee published in The Pine Cone, and you realize that Monterey Mattress Company is deeply committed to supporting this region's arts community.

Every week the Marquee highlights outstanding art and performance on the Monterey Peninsula.

This commitment reflects the level of care maintained by the Monterey Mattress Company team. For more than 20 years, this company has manufactured fine beds locally that far exceed industry standards. They manufacture for leading Monterey Peninsula hotels and inns, and ship their beds around the world.

Because they manufacture right here, they are able to bypass the brand names' national marketing and distribution costs, as well as the retailers' mark-up.

Monterey Mattress Company saves you money. At the same time, they are able to use much higher quality upholstery materials than utilized by national brand names.

Find out for yourself the Monterey Mattress Company difference. The showroom is open 10 to 6 every day on Carmel Rancho Lane, near the entrance to The Barnyard, Carmel. Call 625-9911.

Silver Feather Trading Co.

Traveling directly to the reservations, Joanne Flynn, owner of the Silver Feather Trading Company, is able to collect the finest examples of North American Indian art.

"I am very strict about the work being authentic," explains Flynn. "Everything is hand made by Navajos, Hopis, Zunis. The store represents about 25 different nations at any one time."

The Silver Feather Trading Company is located on the Ocean Avenue level of Carmel Plaza. Showcased in one spot is the full breadth of Native American artwork, including Kachina dolls, silver jewelry, Zuni fetishes, pottery, rugs and sculpture.

In addition to maintaining very high standards, Flynn is also able to fulfill client's special requests for specific types of art.

For more information, call 624-3622.

Toys In The Attic

Indulge your nostalgia or just build up that die-cast model car collection with the help of Toys in the Attic. This Carmel Plaza fixture is newly moved to larger quarters across the way from the old store on the Garden Level of the plaza.

Owner David Schmidt retains a healthy "baby boomer" nostalgia for the toys of his youth. Toys in the Attic is packed cheek-by-jowl with items to delight grown-ups and kids alike. You'll find top-drawer stuffed animals by Gund, Ganz and Steiff. There are limited-edition Barbie dolls dressed in extravagant Bob Mackie gowns and Madame Alexander dolls — a Carmel exclusive. Madeline is also at home here.

Curious George is well-represented in collectibles that range from refrigerator magnets to jack-in-the-boxes. And you'll also find tin wind-up toys.

Toys in the Attic is open every day. To learn more, simply call 622-9011.

Chamber Music Society opens season at 8 tonight with Clemente Piano Trio

THE CLEMENTE Piano Trio, chosen by Carnegie Hall to be on its Distinctive Debut Series for 1997/98, opens the Carmel Chamber Music Society's season with a performance at 8 tonight in Sunset Theater, San Carlos at Ninth.

Founded in 1986, the string trio has been praised for its youthful spirit, artistry and stage presence. As part of the Rising Star Series, the trio will tour Europe as well as perform their usual annual concertizing in the United States, Australia and Japan.

The trio's repertoire includes works by contemporary composer Smalley.

Although the society is supported by membership, a limited number of single tickets will be available at the box office before the evening concert. Tickets are $15 and $5 for persons under 21. For information call 625-2212.

Frank Quilantang, Jr. as The Cobbler, calls up The Demons, as danced by Merissa Thummel (left) and Quincy Gardenhire (right) to put a curse on the Red Shoes. The Carmel Ballet Company's original full-length ballet, 'The Red Shoes,' will be performed at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Sunset Center as part of the Carmel Performing Arts Festival. Carmel Ballet Company is part of Dance Kids, Inc., a non-profit organization bringing dance and theater to the youth of Monterey County.

Monarchs feted during annual Butterfly Parade Saturday in Pacific Grove

PACIFIC GROVE'S 58th Annual Butterfly Parade arrives Saturday. The parade will include costumed children from the Pacific Grove Unified School District, grades K through 5, featuring the kindergarten children dressed as Monarch Butterflies. Both the Pacific Grove High School and the Pacific Grove Middle School marching bands will participate.

The Butterfly Parade begins at 10:30 a.m. in front of Robert Down Elementary School on Pine at Fountain. The children march down Fountain to Lighthouse Avenue, through "Downtown P.G." until they turn up 17th Street and return to Robert Down School via Pine Avenue.

Following The Parade is the Annual Butterfly Bazaar located in the playground behind Robert Down School. The bazaar offers games, food, drinks, prizes and a Country Store. The proceeds from The Butterfly Bazaar are shared by the five PTAs in the Pacific Grove Unified School District.

Late breaking events to add to your Carmel Performing Arts Festival list

WORKSHOPS

Poet John Dotson, "Cooking Class for the Soul: The Dazzle and Surprise of Poetry" — tomorrow, 2 - 5 p.m., Sunset Center, Room 4.

Learn how poetry works. John Dotson offers his recipe for the dazzle and surprise of poetry, joining ingredients from quantum physics, chaos science and a mystic tradition or two.

Cost is $35 at the door or $25 for festival performing artists (must show artists' pass for discount).

Mime and Puppetry Workshop for Young People with Zoot — tomorrow and Sunday, 2 - 5 p.m., with place to be announced.

Mime artist/actor Zoot shows young people how to use break-dancing skills or interest to investigate the artistry of mime and life-sized puppetry.

Cost is $10 at the door (scholarships available).

BREAKFAST PLAY READING

Listen to local and guest artists read a play selected for this unique part of the the festival while enjoying a buffet breakfast — beginning Sunday with "Picturing Dorothea" by Elizabeth Roden at 9:30 a.m. at the General Store/Forge in the Forest, corner of Junipero and Fifth.

Playwright Director Lee Brady brings a cast of San Francisco actors, including ACT veteran Winifred Mann, to read this mytho-biographical play of the last months in the life of photojournalist Dorothea Lange.

Cost is $14. Seating is limited and advance ticket purchase is not available, so early arrival is advised.

There will be breakfast play readings on Oct. 19 and 25, which will be announced in next week's Pine Cone.

You"ll learn about viticultural practices and histories, and taste barrel samples from each individual vineyard as you look over each sight. Then, end the day with a tasting of current releases to experience how the varietels are pieced together to form Chalone Vineyard's final blends. Bring walking shoes, sun hat and a thirst for knowledge. Reservations required, $25 per person. Call Kent at Chalone for information and reservations (408) 678-1717.

Carmel Valley attack of that strange dis

THE QUAIL Lodge TomatoFest™ was a resounding success for the Carmel and Carmel Valley Youth centers but the sizzling heat brought out the worst in many of the stormers of the colorful buffet. Beautiful food that the many dedicated chefs had prepared and donated to the festival was demolished in the first half hour, leaving later attendees hungry and resentful. What is it about a buffet that cancels reason and food manners? A grandiose buffet invites "tastes," not huge heaping portions slopping over the edges of plates. Certainly one ought to think about the other guests, some late arrivals and others not so agile! ... n'est-ce pas?

Traveling Gourmet

By Lotte Mendelsohn

Apropos of tastings

The mild evening and the perfect venue of Carmel Plaza was festive with balloons, Mardi Gras masks and the music of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Rotary Band for the Ninth Annual Taste of Carmel. More than 250 strolling guests played out the New Orleans theme of "Let the Good Times Roll," during the well-planned and smoothly executed event.

Twenty-five restaurants were represented chiefly by the owners or executive chefs, who personally offered mouth-watering tidbits to merry guests. The merriment was made more so by the generously filled glasses of Monterey's premier vintages. Outstanding food was offered by Casanova, The Covey at Quail Lodge, Il Fornaio, Patisserie Boissiere Cafe, The Baja Cantina, Le Coq D'Or and each of the other donors of time, product and charm. Thanks to the Winemaker and Restaurateur community. You always come through.The Pine Cone salutes you!

Pandering to peepers, Yosemite calls

Our beautiful state park has had some difficult P.R. in the past year but nowhere in the country is the Fall season more spectacular.

Four-star Tenaya Lodge at the very entrance to the park offers both indoor and outdoor pleasures. If one or some in your group prefer Jacuzzis and soothing massages to the hike to Bridal Veil Falls or the photo ops that are the shutter bug's delight at every turn, there's something for everyone. Executive Chef Fred Clabaugh is known for his seasonal pairing with local game and fowl as well as the Winemaker Dinners held monthly. This month Niebaum Coppola is featured and in November, Silver Fox Winery takes center glass. Reservations and information: (800) 635-5807.

Double good news from the Highlands Inn

Congratulations to Lincoln Carson, the new pastry chef. Carson carries impressive credentials from La Cote Basque in New York and his recently sweetly won award from New York magazine for Best Dessert Menu. You can sample at the Pacific's' Edge his signature Peppermint Bombe, but his "Molten Chocolate Cake" and his profiteroles which he serves filled with crunchy peanut butter ice cream topped with chocolate sauce, oh my, what a future this young man has here in our collective, chocolate loving bosoms!

The second flash from the H.I. is that Lidia Bastianich, Wolfgang Puck and Charlie Trotter will be the stars of the 1998 Masters. Call right this minute for the schedule and to make early reservations. 624-3801. (I promised you a review on the cookbook and I WILL get it to you.)

Star struck or just plain hungry?

Crystal Cruises thinks up the most irresistible combinations of things to do, see, eat and drink. Their newest plan for '98 (as you cruisers well know, you have to sign up well in advance for the best accommodations and the best fares) is a package called the Routes of Royalty .You can look forward to chuckles from Jonathan Winters, truffles from Jacques Pepin, Jeremiah Tower and Andre Soltner and wine masters to dazzle. Another series is called "Computer University at Sea" and that's one I'd really like to join. The company itself sends out wonderful brochures to the local travel agents, so check with yours.

Grape harvest enters homestretch

By CLAUDIA SMITH
Owner, Paraiso Springs Vineyards

GROWERS ARE constantly "dodging bullets." That is the nature of the farming business. As we are coming down the homestretch with our grape harvest in Monterey County, grape growers are especially nervous. Every week El Niño is in the news with a renewed promise of impending disaster.

Unlike some premium grape growing regions, Monterey County shares second billing to a giant fresh produce industry. For those growers with dry beans, strawberries, peppers and other rain sensitive crops, it is as harrowing as for us wine grape growers. Not to diminish the anxiety of getting a fall crop to market intact, for most "row crop" growers, this is one of two or three rotations of crops in the growing year. For the wine grape grower, this is it. We have been working the entire season, starting at pruning time in December 1996 to get to September/October with the best quality premium wine grapes headed into the winery.

Claudia Smith

At pruning time, we make decisions how to establish the potential crop load by choosing the best spur locations, the best canes to tie down, and generally, the best fruit wood. Depending on how many acres there are to prune, it sometimes is a race to the finish to get everything done in winter rains and muddy vineyards before bud break.

The crop is greatly determined by how they fared the previous year. How much the wine was stressed by the crop load, water and specific nutrient requirements, how much sunlight the dormant fruit buds received are some determining factors in the crop for next year. Considering all that, the vines are pruned and bud break occurs in early spring. Lately, bud break has been as early as February for some varieties in the Salinas Valley.

One of the biggest factors in determining crop size is the weather at bloom time. Here we go, dodging bullets again, hoping the fates will be kind and deal us grape growers a mild spring. The grapevine actually has a very delicate "flower". The Australians call this period "flowering"; we call it "bloom". When we get rains, blustery cold spring winds, or frost, our little grape flowers set poor fruit. The flavors may be wonderful, but the crop may be very uneven and small in size. Some varieties are more "bullet proof" than others; some are very sensitive

Larry Baskett Trio and Dick conte Trio
Sat. Oct. 11

It's trio night at the Jazz Store! Trumpet player Larry Baskett plays with a style reminiscent of Chet Baker. With a warm tone and depth of emotion, Baskett's interpretations are full of heart and understanding. RandyVincent and Chris Amberger on guitar and bass will round out the group. Their latest release is Chalice. The Dick Conte Trio has performed at the best venues for jazz in the S.F. Bay area. Conte is a veteran of jazz radio, currently working on KCSM and KKSF, and his trio's current recording is entitled Yesterdays. With Conte's straight ahead approach, the two trios together will provide a complete mix of ballads and swing.

Kitty Margolis
Sat. Oct. 18

Kitty Margolis, the San Francisco jazz vocal sensation was recently awarded a Bay Area Music Award (BAMMIE) for "Outstanding Jazz vocalist." She is a dazzling singer with an exuberant, inventive approach and mastery of improvisation, as well as a captivating stage presence. She gave a memorable performance at the Jazz Store last November, and with her new Mad-Kat Records release, Straight Up With A Twist, Margolis will have some refreshingly new material to perform.

John "Buddy" Conner
Thurs. Oct. 25

Jazz and blues vocalist Buddy Conner is a unique performer, with a powerful voice, clean phrasing and entertaining style. He's been compared to Billy Eckstein and Joe Williams, and can croon, scream, scat, moan and beg. He was featured vocalist with Earl Hines' Orchestra, and has performed at numerous jazz festivals, including Monterey. He will be backed by one of the best accompanists around, pianist Spencer Allen.

SOCIAL EVENTS

BEEN TO ANY GOOD FESTIVALS LATELY?

THIS WAS one of the most exciting Saturdays ever. The Monterey County Film Commission staged its 10th Anniversary Gala, and the Carmel Performing Arts Festival hosted its first cocktail party.

At Sunset Center, artists, volunteers, theater lovers and actors came to celebrate at the Carmel Performing Arts Festival opening before Pilobolus Too took the stage.

"How do you feel about all of this now that it is starting to roll?" I asked Robin McKee, producing artistic director of the multi-faceted festival.

Producing Artistic Director Robin McKee and Board President Robert Walker turned up for the opening reception of the Carmel Performing Arts Festival at Sunset Center.

Marcia Hovick and Stephen Moorer, stars of 'Coriolanus' at the Outdoor Forest Theatre, chatted during Saturday's Carmel Performing Arts Festival opening reception.

Patricia Potter, Monterey County Film Commission Board Member Morley Brown, Monterey County Supervisor Dave Potter, actress Jessica Walter and her daughter Brooke Bowman, pose Saturday at the Embassy Suites.

Monterey County Film Commission Board Member Joe Anastasia, actor Cliff Robertson, Chairman of the Board Arlene Hartley and former supervisor Sam Karas enjoy a few moments at Saturday's 10th anniversary for the commission.

"Oh, I love the serendipity of ideas and talent that has come together in this labor of love. The entire festival is an idea whose time has come," she said, and most of those present agreed. McKee, dressed in a long black velvet gown which gave her a very dramatic look, continued working quietly as others enjoyed the reception.

A post-show gathering intermingled artists and admirers, and McKee stated that every evening for the duration of the festival will feature a dinner for the artists. Board President Robert Walker, Stephen Moorer, Marcia Hovick, Walt DeFaria, Kayla Perper and other local theater folk were all very excited too as they chatted about the next three weeks of music, dance and theater in Carmel!

■ Cheers to Hollywood North

Later, at the Embassy Suites, The Monterey County Film Commission celebrated its 10th anniversary in the company of Jessica Walter and Cliff Robertson, both of whom have starred in movies produced here on the Peninsula.

The lobby was brimming with Monterey, Carmel and Seaside society mavens and spouses dressed to the nines. They made a handsome sight. We spotted Marti and John Myszak; Artie and Lee Early; Dr. Herbert Berman and his daughter, Amy; Sam and Edie Karas; Morley Brown and Ron Weitzman; Joe and Debbie Anastasia; Phyllis Decker; Don and Jackie Craghead; Teresa Del Piero; Sam Harris; Supervisor Simon Salinas and Supervisor Dave Potter with his wife, Pat; former senator Henry Mello; Julie Armstrong; Lei Fernandez and others.

All sipped delicious wines as pianist Dale Elliott, who came all the way from Atlanta to entertain, played marvelous oldies. Later on, during dinner, when he played "Can't Help Lovin' That Man," the audience broke out in spontaneous applause. Elliot is the cousin of Clifford Bagwell, who chaired the event.

The beautiful black and white program, which contained a miniature 1998 calendar, was filled with interesting notes about the Monterey County Film Commission. In the decade since it was established by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors, this sensational group has attracted more than 60 film projects each year, accounting for an annual average of $2.5 million spent by production companies here. With a library of more than 2,000 location images, the commission handles 300 inquiries yearly from film companies and location scouts. It further markets the county as a film venue through trade shows and advertising.

Social Spotlight

By Dodie Barkley

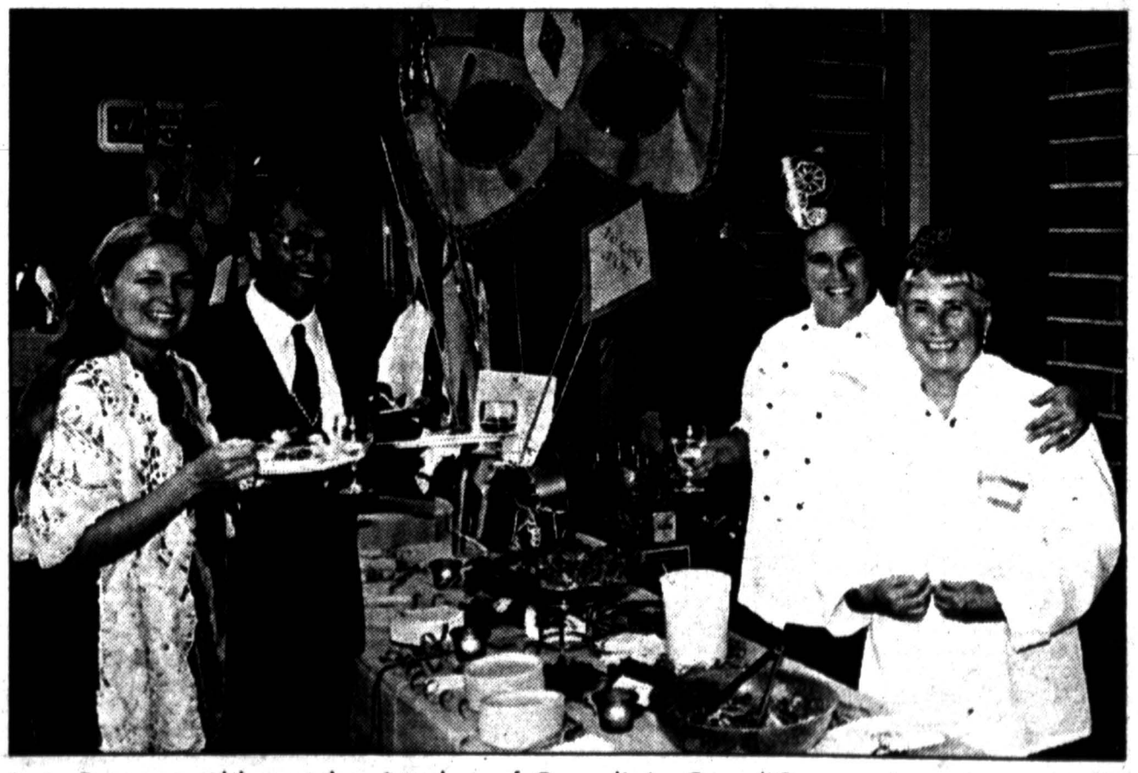
Barry Brown, KION TV-46 meteorologist, was master of ceremonies and introduced Jessica Walter, who gave a short speech thanking everyone for inviting her, and Cliff Robertson, who humorously described his young daughter's complete lack of knowledge of his vocation. He also related that when "PT-109" was filmed, President Kennedy gave the OK for Robertson to portray him. Later, David Whorf, another actor in the movie, informed us that Kennedy insisted on having the final word on all the actors in that film.

Teresa Del Piero related that Hollywood actress Geena Davis was her roommate in college.

Salinas gave a special plaque to Executive Director Karen Nordstrand, and special bouquets of roses were then given to Sam Karas and Julie Armstrong.

After a delicious roast beef repast,

Anton Salameh and Bert Simpson of Anton and Michel held ostrich eggs and served ostrich steaks at Taste of Carmel.



Lorie Parsons and her mother Annelore of Carmel's Le Coq d'Or served Marilyn and Don Uribe delicious European at the CBA gala in Carmel Plaza.

SOCIAL EVENTS

Walter and Robertson cut the anniversary cake.

When Red Malone's Esquire Band started playing, the dancers immediately hit that floor with abandon. A marvelous-fun-filled evening for everyone. For more information about the Monterey County Film Commission, call 646-0910.

■ Laissez Le Bon Temps Rouler!

Last Friday night's "Taste of Carmel" presented by the Carmel Business Association (CBA) at Carmel Plaza was so divine, it should have been called "Taste of Heaven." Attendees enjoyed generous offerings from 24 Carmel bistros and releases from several Monterey County vineyards. And it was so pretty there!

The decorating committee created a harlequin effect using huge masks designed by Zak Gibson. Balloons, flags and colorful lights made the plaza's three levels glow like a Christmas tree.

Servers at the wine tables gave us superb descriptions of the blendings and tastes to expect.

Oysters on the half-shell, ostrich steaks, polenta with mushrooms to die for, all kinds of pastas, rice and curry and fruit drinks, waters and coffees made the "Taste" well worth attending. Chef Wendy Brodie told me that it keeps getting better each year.

But the final test awaited me.

"Take just three steps, don't look back and you'll succeed," I muttered to myself. I took the three steps, but I looked back at Patisserie Boissiere's coconut custard pie, smothered in whipped cream and strawberries, together with other dessert delights, and I failed. I couldn't wait for the slender (Have you ever noticed how slender all bakery personnel seem to be?) young girl to cut me a slice, which was scarfed down in minutes. Patisserie has been serving French-style desserts for more than 25 years in Carmel.

Caffe Cardinale, owned by Rocco Cardinale, son of Gaspar Cardinale who sold shoes to Carmelites for years, offered delicious coffee.

The silent and live auctions were phenomenal, including a grand prize of two round-trip tickets to London via British Airways!

The Rotary Blues Band music came close to the blues you can hear in Harlem on a Saturday night. When that harmonica player covered his harmonica with both hands, closed his eyes and began ringing out that soul music, even the kids sat down to listen and watch. It was so jazzy-bluesie, I expected to see Ethel Waters come down those stairs singing "St. Louis Woman." Louis Armstrong was there, I know.

Kudos to the CBA for arranging such magic in Carmel for the ninth year!

Allen Kemmerer, Jeri Crittenden, TomatoFest originator Gary Ibsen, Jim Gregg and Linda Lamb were active participants in the Sept. 28 event.

■ TomatoFest draws devotees to Quail Meadows

As I drove toward the lake at Quail Meadows where Gary Ibsen's Sixth Annual TomatoFest was in progress, it was like stepping into a lovely painting by Renoir or Monet.

Long tables banked with white and red tablecloths were set up on that green grassy slope on Sept. 28. These were bedecked with baskets of bright red, orange and yellow tomatoes. A crowd of more than 500 hovered about the luscious tomatoes, which were ripe for touching and tasting.

Ancient Romans called them "love apples," and they looked so delectable, so juicy ripe, I couldn't help but agree with that description.

The TomatoFest showcased more than 60 varieties of heirloom and hybrid tomatoes from around the world. A huge horn of plenty, centered on a table, was filled with tomatoes of all sizes, shapes and colors. The horn, reminiscent of an old-fashioned harvest fair, drew many gazes.

Ibsen started the event as a small get-together for friends several years ago. When it became a public event this year, it sold out immediately.

Local chefs David Beckwith, Chris Sprecher, Maureen Signorella, Wendy Brodie,Csaba Ajan, Gaston Georis, Cal Stemonov and Beat Geiger among others, prepared fabulous tomato dishes for the Fest. Ibsen himself submitted delectable fried green tomatoes. I especially liked the Tomato Gin Soup created by Bradley Jones.

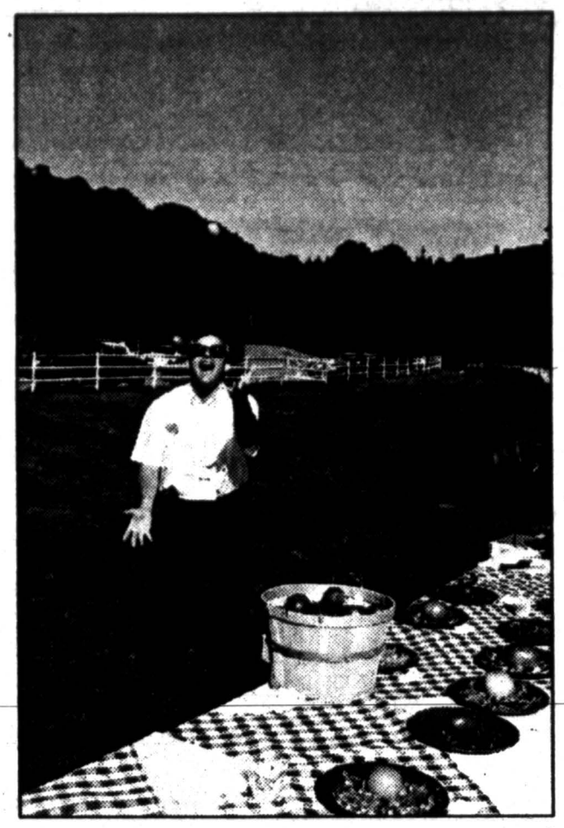
What also made the TomatoFest memorable were the geese that flew over our heads every 15 to 20 minutes. One goose would give the signal and then several, honking like crazy, took off, circled over and returned to the other side of the lake, as the next group got ready to take off. Just incredible!

I hope that Ibsen will bring back TomatoFest again next year.



Quail Lodge Executive Director Michael Hoffman juggles tomatoes in the air at Gary Ibsen's annual TomatoFest.

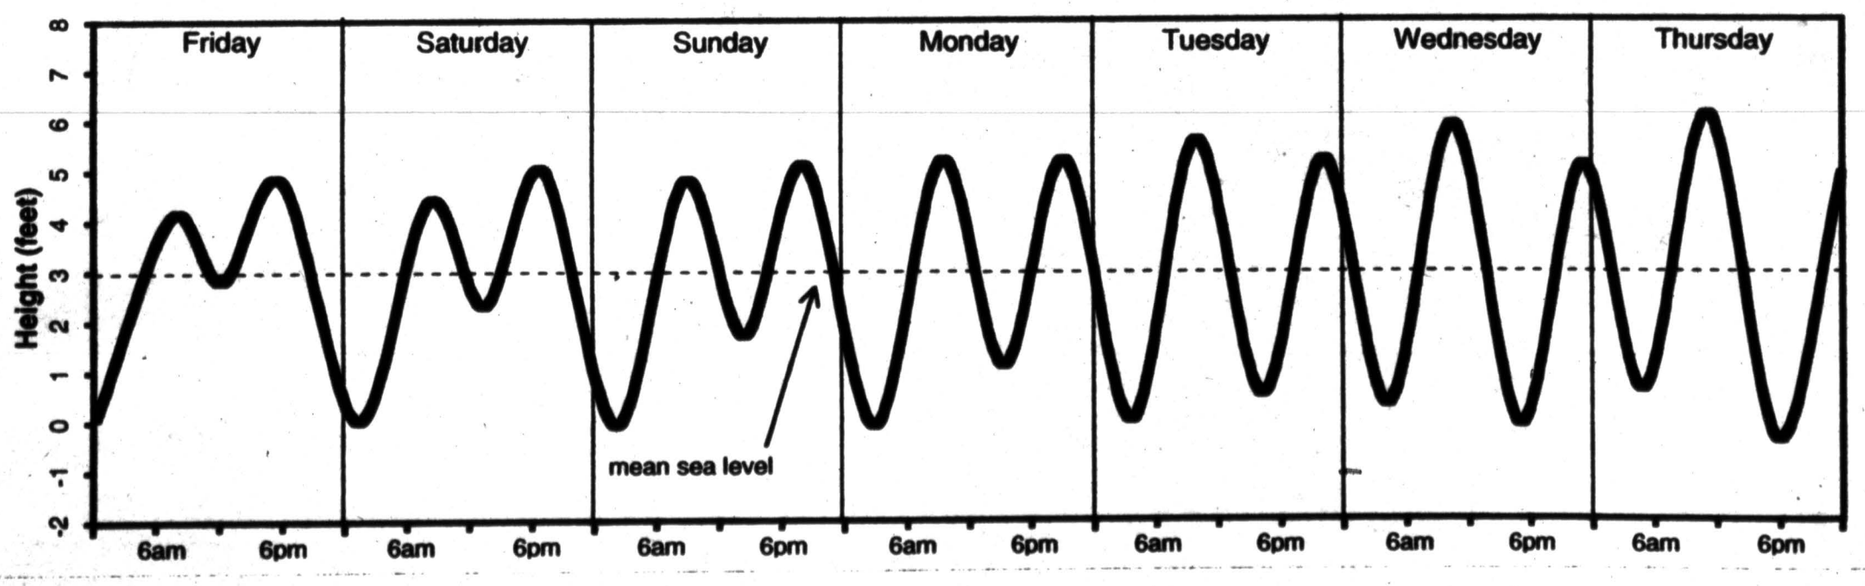
Carmel Bay Tides — October 10 to 16, 1997



• Use this chart to help plan your activities along our incomparable coastline. For example, a sunset campfire at the beach is best planned when there will not be a high tide during the evening hours. Very low tides (especially those below the zero level) provide the best opportunity to explore local tide pools. Fishing is said to be best on days when the tidal variation is greatest. And don't forget that coastal flooding and erosion can be severe when a very high tide coincides with a major storm.

• Tides are primarily caused by the pull of the moon and the sun on earth's oceans. Accordingly, the greatest tides (spring tides) occur when the sun, moon and Earth are aligned (full moon or new moon). When the sun, moon and earth form a right angle tides are smaller (neap tides).

• Every 25 hours there are two high tides and two low tides. "Mean sea level" is the average of all tides and is the same everywhere on the Earth. "Mean high tide" (approximately 4.7 feet on the tide chart) is the average of all local high tides and, in California, is the legal boundary between private coastal lands and publicly-owned tidelands. The zero on tide charts (also called the "datum") is the average of the lower of the low tides that occur in each cycle.

• Chart prepared by The Carmel Pine Cone using data provided by the National Weather Service.

The spring of 1997 was glorious, the previous season was excellent, so that most of us grape growers have been nurturing one of the finest crops in all varieties that we have ever seen. We have had an atypically warm growing year at Paraiso Springs Vineyards, so we have been doing some adjusting of irrigation programs and other viticultural practices to attain the balance of maturing fruit and canopy as we have come down that homestretch to harvest.

The more mature the grapes become, the more vulnerable they are to inclement weather. And of course, some varieties such as Sauvignon Blanc and Johannisberg Riesling that mature later, are also more susceptible than other varieties. Though my husband, Rich, jokes about "dodging another bullet," when a southern storm passes through leaving our grapes unscathed, there is truly nothing we can do. So we continue to duck and weave, hold our breath, and harvest,quickly, as our grapes attain those fabulous flavors we want for our wines. We are half way there right now — Bonne Chance!

Follow these simple steps to grow your own California oaks

By THE CARMEL BEACH AND FORESTRY COMMISSION

Editor's note: Carmel's abundant oaks are enjoyed by everyone who lives here. These sturdy trees with their artistically twisted limbs seem to live forever, but are actually very susceptible to all sorts of human impacts. In an earlier article, Carmel's forestry experts told how to protect oaks and other trees on your property by properly landscaping around them. This week, you'll learn how to start a new generation of oaks from acorns you collect yourself. And later this month, you'll learn how to protect trees on your property from being injured during construction.

Oaks are easy to grow and develop rapidly. Trees that best survive are the native trees that have evolved genetic traits favoring the local conditions of soil, moisture, climate, etc. By planting acorns from local trees, you maximize chances for survival and minimize damaging local stock by introducing trees with poorly adapted genes.

Here's how to proceed:

1. Collect acorns in the fall from healthy, vigorous trees in your neighborhood — directly from the tree or under it on the ground, choosing large acorns. Remove the cap if it is attached.

2. Soak acorns for one hour if picked off the tree or 24 hours if taken from the ground. Add 1/2 cup of bleach per gallon to the water. Discard any acorns that float or have holes, cracks or other defects. Dry the acorns on towels, newspaper or other absorbent material.

3. Pack the acorns in zip-lock plastic bags and place in refrigerator (not freezer) for at least a month. This should stimulate faster and more complete germination. Check the stored acorns occasionally for mold. If mold develops, repeat the soaking and drying and return to the refrigerator. Acorns can be stored in the refrigerator for several months.

4. After refrigeration, plant the acorn in the ground or in a container (see Paragraph 6). When planting in the ground, choose a sunny, weed-free spot with well-drained soil. With a hand trowel or shovel, dig a shallow hole. Loosen the soil several inches under the hole and add a pinch of Miracle Grow. Plant the acorn sideways, one inch below the surface. Water lightly.

5. Water weekly until the seedling is well established. Do not over-water; this will cause the acorn to rot. After the seedling is established, watering two or three times during the dry season should be sufficient.

6. For container-grown seedlings, use a quart milk carton or similar container slit near the bottom for drainage. Fill with potting soil. Thoroughly moisten the soil and place on a saucer or pie tin. After planting acorn, place the container near a window where it will receive adequate light.

7. Container-grown seedlings should be transferred to the planting site when 3 to 4 inches high. Scrape a circle two feet in diameter around the seedling to remove other vegetation, thus eliminating competition for moisture. Placing some type of mulch around the seedling will also help conserve moisture and discourage competing plants.

For further information, call the Carmel Forestry Department at 624-3543. Acorns are available from Friends of Carmel Forest by calling 625-2855.

Leaving '95 behind: Mission Fields fetching higher prices

By PAUL WOLF

CHALK IT up to a combination of four factors: the county's work to prevent future floods, the shortness of people's memories, the rehabilitation of flood-damaged homes and the general rise in Carmel property values.

Whatever the reason, Carmel's Mission Fields neighborhood is on the rebound, with homes fetching prices comparable to many other desirable places on the Peninsula.

In 1995, in the wake of two flood disasters, the average home price in Mission Fields was $255,000. So far this year, the average is $311,000, according to figures in the multiple listing service.

"The flood factor is still there in Mission Fields, but is not as dominant a factor," said Lance Monosoff, broker for Central Coast Properties.

The upturn in the overall housing market over the past 2 or 3 years has not left Mission Fields behind, as some expected in the sad days following the disasters.

A street in Mission Fields, just west of Highway 1 between Rio Road and the Carmel River.

Monosoff said flood fears still vary greatly depending on the client. "Some people are not concerned, but when I present some of my clients with the prospect of living there, some say, 'Absolutely not. I won't take that risk.'"

The increase in prices is more dramatic than simple averages would indicate, Monosoff says. The 1995 average price of $255,000 leaves out the fact that many houses put on the market in 1995 did not move. Only three homes were sold that year, according to the MLS.

'Stigma' remains

According to Pacific Grove-based appraiser Craig Butorac, whether or not people remember the 1995 floods, the fact that much of the neighborhood is inside a 100-year flood plain will affect real estate transactions there.

Generally, buyers learn quickly that banks require flood insurance before they make loans available, and that may not be welcome news, Butorac said.

Undoubtedly, the flood zone lowers the value of homes, he said. If the neighborhood has rebounded, that is thanks in large part to the wide-scale improvement of houses. "You have new kitchens, cabinets, sheetrock and paint jobs," Butorac said. "The homes have been dolled-up."

Monosoff explained that Mission Fields sales prices are comparable with those found in Pacific Grove, hinting at Mission Fields' restored desirability. However, the houses in PG tend to be much older and smaller. Also, other Carmel homes outside the city limits claim higher prices than those in Mission fields. The inescapable conclusion is that the flood zone is and will remain a factor, Monosoff said.

Monosoff described the neighborhood as providing an entrée into Carmel for people who cannot afford other locations but want their children to attend Carmel schools.

"It's been quite an amazing rebound for the neighborhood," commented Jim Scholfield, a Mission Fields resident who has witnessed the lifting of spirits within the neighborhood over the past two-and-a-half years. The values have jumped up because it is still a great neighborhood."

Meanwhile, Eileen La Mothe said the floods were "instrumental" in her family's decision to seek high elevations: They moved to Carmel Meadows in May. "Mission Fields is a wonderful neighborhood — great for kids, with those cul de sacs and so close to everything. We stayed two more winters but then moved."

La Mothe, who is married and has two children, said she was pleased with the sale price and the fact that the property stayed on market only briefly.

Will beach access plan be enough to win Coastal Commission approval of Casa Palmero?

By PAUL MILLER

UNDER MOST circumstances, the toughest battle for somebody who wants to build along the coast is with the staff of the California Coastal Commission. Throughout the commission's 20-year history applicants have learned that if the uncompromising environmentalists on the Coastal Commission staff approved their building plans, the commission itself usually would, too.

But the Pebble Beach Company discovered in July that Dave Potter — Monterey County Supervisor for the Del Monte Forest and a California Coastal Commissioner — can be a much tougher opponent than the commission's staff.

And this Friday Pebble Beach Company officials will find out how much influence Potter has with his fellow commissioners.

At issue is the company's plan to convert an aging mansion adjacent to the Lodge at Pebble Beach into a 24-unit spa and 24-room inn. The company also wants to build a 315-space underground parking garage adjacent to the spa where a parking lot sits now.

A group of Pebble Beach residents have vigorously fought the plan, decrying what they say is "creeping commercialization" in Del Monte Forest and citing what they claim will be big increases in traffic on the streets leading to Casa Palmero.

But many Pebble Beach residents support the plan, which has already been approved by the Del Monte Forest Property Owner's association, the Monterey County Planning Commission and the Board of Supervisors — all by overwhelming votes.

And when the Coastal Commission's staff first analyzed the project earlier this summer, they determined that the project did not even raise a single significant environmental issue under the California Coastal Act. Staff recommended that the commission let approval of the project stand without even looking at it in detail.

But the commission — responding to appeals from project opponents and from Potter himself — voted unanimously in July not to approve the plan right away. Staff was directed to analyze the plan in greater detail and report back to the commission about the project's impacts.

The new staff report again recommends approval, and says the project will have very minimal environmental impacts. Staff added a permit condition requiring the company to enhance public access to Stillwater Cove before it can begin construction on Casa Palmero.

In a letter to the commission, Pebble Beach official Ed Brown immediately agreed to the access improvements staff recommended. Once again, staff and the company are in agreement about the project.

But Dave Potter has indicated that he has not changed his mind — particularly about the Casa Palmero parking garage which he says should not be considered until overall company development plans for the Lodge area — if any — are known.

How many of the other 11 Coastal Commissioners will agree with Potter instead of with staff? That question will be answered — and the future of Casa Palmero will be determined — at Friday's meeting.

campaigning on our part, the city has already offered $100,000 toward the cost of ambulance service. They have also offered to try to find a ways to exempt persons having difficulty to pay the tax.

It is important to note that fifty-percent of ambulance use occurs within the business district yet their assessment covers only 21% of it's costs. Obviously the other 79% of the assessment falls directly to our residents. Businesses still complain more loudly than our residents!

Health and Safety issues come first! Our city is now shifting away from this fundamental duty. Under Carmel's form of government they must remain the highest priority.

Measure B parcel tax initiative goes against good governance and sets a bad precedent. Vote No on Measure B, an unjust tax.

Landlord should interview pet

Dear Editor:

Bob and I are putting our house up for sale and I've been glancing over rentals, just in case.

I keep seeing "no pets" and it worries me. We have an 18-pound terrier mix (SPCA) and I'd rather live in a shack than not have her with us.

I guess the point I want to make is that our dog, Magic, is professionally trained, has never had an accident or chewed on anything. Her only vice is a little extra barking when someone comes to the door. We're working on that.

Bob and I are meticulous renters. We've done it before in between doing a house. Some landlord would be missing out on this because of a sometimes false image of a pet.

I'd like Magic to be interviewed and I know the landlords would fall in love and then trust that we're too aesthetic to have a dog that would trash our surroundings.

So, landlords, please consider some pets as you would children. You could be missing a great tenant.

Rita Firestone Seger, Carmel
